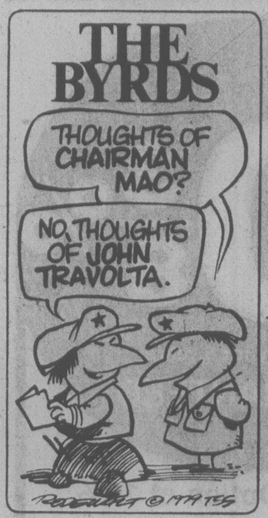
War May Spread Soviets Warn



Times News Services

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union, demanding an immediate Chinese withdrawal from Vietnam, today warned for the first time that the fighting in Indochina may spread.

At the same time in Peking, U.S. Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal, acting as President Carter's personal emissary, renewed American pressure on China to pull its troops out of Vietnam.

In a 75-minute meeting with Premier Hua Kuo-feng, Blumenthal said he repeated the U.S. position he first delivered on Tuesday to Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping.

In a sober but bitter news commentary today, Pravda said that China has spurned the "voice of reason" and embarked on a bloodletting campaign in Vietnam that threatens to spread unless it is stopped immediately.

The 2,000-word commentary carried by the Tass news agency was written for the Communist Party newspaper by Igor Alexandrov — a name viewed as a pseudonym for top party leaders that reflects the thinking at the highest levels of the Soviet Union.

The commentary repeatedly blamed the West for encouraging China and warned the war between China and Vietnam may spread. "Those who today hope to warm themselves by its flames rashly risk being the next victim of the aggressor and his adventuristic policy," it said.

It also singled out the United States, saying, "The ambivalent stand taken by the U.S. ruling circles in the face of the Chinese leadership's open threats against Vietnam has, as a matter of fact, contributed to Peking's openly taking the warpath."

The article appeared to be a definitive statement on the Soviet attitude toward the Chinese invasion and seemed to lay the groundwork for whatever steps the Kremlin might take against Peking. The Soviet Union already has officially warned China to get out of Vietnam "before its too late."

A public announcement of any change in Soviet policy is likely to come Friday when President Leonid Brezhnev is scheduled to make a nationally televised address on the eve of elections to the Soviet parliament.

No Plates? $250 Fine

Midnight tonight is the deadline for motorists to attach new licence plates, and it may prove costly for the forgetful few. (See lineup picture on page 31).

Police will check vehicles after 12:01 a.m. Thursday.

Owners of vehicles parked on the street will be fined $35 if no plate is showing; $15 if the owner had bought plates but didn't put them on.

For persons caught driving vehicles without plates there is an automatic $250 fine for not having insurance, plus $35. If the plates are in the vehicle the fine is cut to $15.

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will borrow about 1.5 billion Swiss francs worth $900 million U.S. to support the dollar, Finance Minister Jean Chretien disclosed Tuesday.

The minister said negotiations for the Swiss francs from the major Swiss banks were well advanced. Chretien announced two weeks ago the government's intention of seeking financing in Switzerland to support the dollar on international currency markets.

Firebomb No. 15

VANCOUVER (CP) — Firebombers hit another downtown bank early this morning, bringing to 15 the number of Molotov cocktail throwing incidents in the last 10 weeks.

Police said a branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce at 14th Ave. and Main was attacked at about 3:20 a.m. There was a "fair" amount of damage.

Embezzlement, Kickback Probe Demanded by MP

Times News Services

OTTAWA — An investigation by auditor-general James MacDonnell into the possibility of mishandling of public funds by officials of the prestigious Canadian Council of Christians and Jews (CCCJ) was demanded in the Commons Tuesday.

Conservative MP Tom Cossitt, who raised the issue, also wants an investigation of "crooks" in the public service, a reference to alleged use of government computers by private firms.

Cossitt told the Commons he wants MacDonell to investigate "disposition of funds including a reported 4.5 per cent interest $57,000 mortgage and a $9,000 interest free loan to Peter Jones, president of the CCCJ."

Ottawa television broadcaster and local CCCJ board director Max Keeping said "there may be real and mass embezzlement in the organization."

Keeping along with half a dozen members of the local board of directors resigned in the last week.

Cossitt told reporters that government employees have received kickbacks to increase government grants to the CCCJ to $767,000 from $61,000 during the last four years.

He also claimed a number of "prominent Canadians" have resigned from the council because they could not get straight answers about how government grants were spent.

Cossitt refused to elaborate on his charges outside the House — where he is not given immunity from libel suits — but said he would provide further details in the House shortly.

In the reference to crooks, he said in the Commons that a private computer data firm gave one Unemployment Insurance Commission employee a swimming pool in return for use of a government computer after working hours.

The company attempted to compromise other public servants by sending them $20 bills in plain envelopes, Cossitt claimed.

He said an RCMP investigation into the matter is complete, but the government has refused to make public its findings.

"Are they going to keep hiding crooks in the public service and not let the people of Canada know that their money is being embezzled?"

He said in an interview the government is anxious to keep this "pretty smelly business" quiet because some of the UIC employees involved in the alleged embezzlement in 1977 now hold high positions in the government.

Some of the public servants who allegedly allowed the private firm to use the UIC computer were trans-

Angry Inventor Shuts Mill

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

A 68-year-old Ladysmith man has closed down MacMillan Bloedel's sawmill in Chemainus in an effort to get royalties on a chipper knife he invented which he says the company is using.

George Standal, a retired millworker, first set up his one-man picket line Tuesday and about 90 millworkers on the afternoon shift refused to go to work.

He returned this morning and a company spokesman said about 150 dayshift employees also refused to cross his picket line.

The sawmill remained shut down and only the planer mill was operating.

The MacBlo spokesman said the company is seeking a court injunction to prevent the picketing.

A spokesman for the International Woodworkers of America said the union backs Standal because "he's getting the short end of the stick."

He said the union is going to meet with Standal and try to arrange for a lawyer to help him win his case.

Standal said in an interview today the mill uses a special chipper head and knives which he invented in 1962 and on which he holds patents.

He said the equipment was originally manufactured by a Portland, Ore. company from which he received "about a third of a million dollars" in royalties.

However, that company was bought out by Mainland Elworthy Division of Bow Valley Resource Services Ltd. of Vancouver and then, Standal said, the royalties stopped.

He has tried for a number of years to get the company to begin paying royalties on the chipper knives which are used by a number of large sawmill companies in Canada, the U.S. and other countries.

At one time he said he offered to take a flat sum of $200,000 for the patents but Mainland Elworthy gave him "the run around."

Mainland Elworthy vice-president Mike Parent said in an interview today the company feels Standal is acting irresponsibly.

However, he said he feels sorry for the man.

Parent said the company's position, based on legal advice, is that it has no obligation to Standal.

He said the kind of equipment used in the Chemainus mill is designed and manu-

Liberal, Tory MPs Squelch Prices Board

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Liberal and Conservative MPs overwhemingly rejected a New Democratic proposal to set up a Fair Prices Commission equipped with the powers to roll back unjustified price increases.

A handful of 16 New Democrats and Social Credit members voted in favor but 200 Liberals and Conservatives rejected the proposal introduced in the House of Commons Tuesday by NDP leader Ed Broadbent.

However, Consumer Affairs Minister Warren Allmand said he is "fed up" with rising prices and will bring in legislation soon to restore the competition needed to get prices under control.

Allmand told the Commons during debate on the NDP motion that the government will soon reintroduce its long-promised competition bill.

"I am fed up and Canadian consumers are fed up with the unending increases in prices," Allmand told the Commons.

He said companies are able to raise prices because there isn't enough competition in the marketplace.

Allmand said he will bring in amendments to the Combines Investigation Act — aimed at putting stricter regulations on corporate mergers and monopolies — to improve conpetition.

Broadbent challenged the federal government to "show some moral leadership" and set up a prices commission.

Economic Development Minister Robert Andras rejected Broadbent's demands, arguing the commission would not solve the "basic problem of inflation."

"It's time some economic justice went in the direction of Canadian workers," Broadbent told the House.

"We see a special commission zeroing in on particular prices, particular cases where profits are too high. This selective approach will have the effect of deterring others," the NDP leader said.

Andras maintained that "the motion by the NDP does not address the basic problem of inflation.

TRIBES REGAIN OLD TREASURE

Valuable Indian artifacts confiscated over 50 years ago will be returned by the federal government to the two tribes which originally owned them.

The provincial museum has provided temporary storage space for the artifiicts.

The artifacts were seized in 1922 and 1923 after Indian potlatch ceremonies were outlawed.

Potlatches were banned mainly on the grounds that they impoverished Indian families, though some Indians claim the real motive was to destroy their culture.

Ray Hall, a spokesman for the Indian affairs department, said Tuesday many of the items disappeared and some found their way into a private collection now in New York.

"The value of the 338 artifacts awaiting to be returned to the Indian bands who once owned them is not known, but based on the value of Indian artifacts today, they have to be worth thousands of dollars," Hall said.

He cited as an example, a rare Kwakiutl ceremonial dance mask which was recently sold in the U.S. by a private collector for close to $200,000.

Indians held potlatches to celebrate social occasions, giving away vast quantities of food, clothing and blankets to their guests.

Marked Drop in U.S. TV Viewing

By BARRY SUSSMAN
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A majority of Americans say they are watching less television than they used to, a nationwide Washington Post poll has found.

A marked decline in viewing was reported among more affluent and better-educated people, among those who say the quality of TV programs is deteriorating, and among those who report the sharpest dislike for TV commercials. But a lesser decline in viewing also was reported among the bulk of the population — among blacks and whites, women and men, young an old.

In all, 53 per cent of those interviewed said they are watching less TV than they did five years ago, compared with 32 per cent who say they are watching more now.

If those figures are correct, or even close to being correct, they represent a stiking reversal in U.S. entertainment and leisure habits. From the inception of TV until the mid-1970s, viewership had been reported as increasing year after year.

Executives at ABC, CBS and NBC, apprised of these findings, said TV viewing may have levelled off after having reached a "saturation point" several years ago. But they questioned whether people are watching less TV than before.

Jay Eliasberg, a vice-president for research at CBS, said: "I know people are not watching less television, it's that simple."

Saying Nielsen reports and other industry-sponsored gauges of viewing supported his position, Eliasberg maintained that "except for tiny squiggles, TV viewing has not changed in the last three years."

Eliasberg and other TV excutives are skeptical of poll data, saying people are not the best judges of their own television-viewing behavior: if there is a stigma attached to watching television, a natural response would be to deny watching very much.

The Post poll suggests at least part of the reported decline in viewing is tied to strong feelings on the part of many who feel the quality of TV entertainment has been deteriorating.

Over-all, 40 per cent of those interviewed said TV entertainment is better now than it was five years ago, and 41 per cent said it is worse — an even split, with the rest saying it is about the same as it was or offering no opinion.

U.S. Imposing Mideast Deadline?

Times News Services

Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan said today U.S. President Jimmy Carter told him that unless the peace treaty talks with Egypt are wrapped up within 10 days, the United States will reassess its Middle East policy, Israel's state-run radio reported

"Dayan said that Carter told him that he allots only 10 days for handling the Middle East issue and if a settlement is not reached, the United States will adopt a new policy toward the region," the radio said in its late-evening newscast.

The report was based on an off-the-record briefing Dayan gave to the intra-party security and foreign affairs committee of the Israeli Knesset (parliament) on his talks with Egyptian Foreign Minister Mustafa Khalil and secretary of State Cyrus Vance at Camp David last week.

Earlier today Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said there are significant differences between Egypt and Israel in drawing up a peace treaty and he will resist any pressure by Carter that Israel make concessions for conclusion of a pact.

Carter and Begin will meet in Washington, rather than Camp David, to discuss their mounting differences, a White House official said today in Washington.

Carter had wanted the talks held in the seclusion of the mountain retreat with a news blackout. Begin rejected that idea, opting instead for talks in Washington.

The disagreement about location appears to reflect widespread differences between Washington and Jerusalem, extending even to the agenda to be followed in the negotiations between the two leaders when they meet Friday.

By meeting in Washington, Begin would have more freedom to make the Israeli position public.

Even before his expected arrival Thursday, Begin said he disagreed with Carter's assessment that only small differences remained to be resolved between Israel and Egypt.

He said today that the Egyptian stance "is becoming seriously and gravely more extreme."

Begin said he did not plan to meet in Washington with Egyptian Prime Minister Mustapha Khalil should he be there at the same time. He evaded a question about whether he would meet there with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

On Tuesday the Israeli Cabinet rejected Carter's invitation that Begin meet with Khalil in Washington, but later Begin agreed to meet with Carter.

Postal Report Delay 'Explosive'

VANCOUVER (CP) — The president of the Vancouver local of the Canadian Postal Workers Union says a one-month extension of the deadline for a report aimed at ending a contract dispute in the post office could create an explosive situation. (See earlier story on page 28.)

Lloyd Ingram said Tuesday that after the extension was granted Monday by Labor Minister Martin O'Connell, the office of the 1,800-member local was flooded with angry phone calls.

The report, which would set binding terms for a new contract, was to be handed down today by Mr. Justice Lucien Tremblay.

"You wouldn't believe the number of calls I'm getting from people who want to know how or when we take our right to strike back," Ingram said.

the Anti-Inflation Board that said profit margins in major sectors of food processing rose slightly or remained the same in 1978 over 1977."

Andras said opposition parties were against a government-sponsored amendment to the Combines Act in 1974 that would have empowered the government to roll back unjustified price increases.

"That bill died on the order paper and we decided that bill was no longer effective and we brought in the Anti-Inflation Board the next year."

Broadbent said the government should show some "moral leadership" and form an independent commission to deal with "price gouging."

"The government's response up to now has been to study the price situation, saying they can do nothing about inflation," he said.

He said wages rose only 6.4 per cent in 1978 but the cost of living went up 9 per cent. Broadbent warned that if price increases were not slowed, another round of spiralling wage demands would occur.

"This loss of an estimated $340 in spending power must be stopped or major increases will be justifiably demanded by employees later this year," he said.

The Anti-Inflation Board reported Friday food prices in January were up 21 per cent since January, 1978. In terms of weekly consumer spending, the AIB's weekly food basket showed it cost $58.84 to feed a family of four in January, or $8.30 more than it cost in January, 1978.

And Now, It's the Slow Train from U.K. to China. . .

Times News Services

LONDON — "Passengers for Paris, Berlin, Warsaw, Moscow, Irkutsk, Peking, Nanking, Shanghai, Canton and Hong Kong please go to Platform One."

Commuters could hardly believe their ears as the far away destinations sounded Tuesday over the public address system at Victoria Station, the huge London rail complex.

Twenty passengers responded to the call for what British officials claim is the world's longest continuous rail journey — 14,400 kilometres in 42 days, costing $3,590.

The passengers were greeted by Station Manager Ron Neill, decked out in full morning suit and topper, to the accompaniment of stirring melodies from Scottish bagpipes and a brass band.

While everyday passengers were catching prosaic trains such as the 9.30 a.m. to the English Channel coast town of Bognor Regis, the 20 intrepid travellers boarded the Central Kingdom Express to pioneer the direct rail link between London and Hong Kong.

British Rail, the nationalized concern that runs Britain's railroads, expects the new "Orient express" to become a monthly feature next year, the tour organizer, George Pottle, said at a champagne breakfast to speed the first travellers on their way.

The famed Orient Express between Paris and Istanbul made its last run in 1977.

Dr. Leslie Clark-Wilson, 63, and his wife Pat, 50, told reporters that the trip is a complete contrast to jetting for holidays in Spain from their home in Luton, 50 kilometres north of London.

"This trip is a real extravagance but it will be worth it," said Dr. Clark-Wilson.

Dr. John Shackleton Bailey, a retired coroner from Blockley in the West of England, said: "We learned about the Trans-Siberian Express as children, and now we are going there."

His wife Dorothy, at 73 the oldest passenger, added: "We have always gone on holiday by car before, and this will be the experience of a lifetime."

The route wasn't all that new to the retired physician. Even before the Russian Revolution, he was reciting the station-stops on the romanticized trip for geography lessons.

"I'm a pioneer-type, I suppose," Mrs. Shackleton-Bailey said. "It's no good sitting back if you retire. What's the good of fading away?"

Youngest passenger was 33-year-old Mrs. Ildi Moran. Her rock musician husband Mike Moran decided against going with her to Hong Kong, but drove her to Victoria from their home at Radlett, 25 kilometres north of London, in their elegant Bentley car.

"The Bentley seemed so appropriate," said Mrs. Moran. "I seriously considered wearing a black hat and veil."

The old rail route to China — once popular among British civil servants and businessmen living in Asia — crossed Manchuria. This one goes through Mongolia instead.

And by some counts it's a bargain: about 38 cents a mile, including the trip back from Hong Kong — by air.

My Brother, And I Love Him: Carter

WASHINGTON — Those who claim Billy Carter has made anti-Semitic remarks are wrong, according to his brother, the president. "I have known him since he was born. And I know for a fact that he is not anti-Semitic and has not ever made a serious critical remark against Jews or other people in our country," President Jimmy Carter said Tuesday. "Billy's my brother. He is seriously ill at this point. I love him," he added.

MOSCOW —Leonid Brezhnev slurred his speech and had trouble pinning a medal on Cuban Defence Minister Raoul Castro in his first public appearance in more than a month. The 72-year-old Soviet president decorated Castro with the Order of Lenin Tuesday but had trouble affixing the medal to Castro's green uniform, a TV broadcast of the ceremony showed. Brezhnev smiled and joked with Castro, but slurred his words badly as he read his remarks from a small white booklet. His eyes also wandered during Castro's brief speech.

LOS ANGELES — Former British washing machine tycoon John Bloom has pleaded guilty under a plea-bargaining arrangement to reduced charges in a plan to copy illegally the hit film Star Wars onto videotape cassettes, a prosecutor said today. Bloom, 47, former head of the now defunct Rolls Razor Corp., had faced a prison sentence if convicted on the original charges. Prosecutor Philip McAleer told reporters he will seek only a substantial fine and will not oppose probation for Bloom.

McAleer said he believes the fine should be substantial because of what he called Bloom's personal wealth.

WEST BERLIN — Former Nazi leader Rudolf Hess, in hospital with acute bronchitis, was resting quietly Tuesday with no change in his condition, a British military spokesman said. Hess, who will be 85 in April, was taken Monday to the British military hospital from his solitary cell in Spandau jail for the second time in two months. Officials refused to give details.

BELLINGHAM — The Whatcom County prosecutor won a 30-day extension Tuesday to decide whether he will seek the death penalty in the murder trial of Kenneth Bianchi. Bianchi, 27, has pleaded innocent to slaying two Western Washington University co-eds in January

MEMPHIS — The U.S. Internal Revenue Service has seized from entertainer Jerry Lee Lewis almost a dozen vehicles — including a Rolls-Royce — along with furnitue and stereo equipment. Eve Miller, public information officer for the IRS in Nashville, said a lien was filed Tuesday against Lewis for $160,000 in personal income taxes. A seizure order followed. Ms. Miller said IRS special agents, accompanied by U.S. treasury department agents and sheriff's deputies, removed the property from Lewis's Nesbit, Miss., home. Ms. Miller said the articles will be sold at a public sale to satisfy the tax debt.

SYDNEY, Australia — A Sydney woman has left property worth more than a $100,000 to Sanjay Gandhi, son of former Indian prime minister Indira Gandhi. The property, a two-storey beach-side building, was owned by Ruth Cowell, who died last May a few months before her 80th birthday. The building is to be put up for public auction. A family friend, Ronni Sulich, said Mrs. Cowell had been heavily involved in the "spiritual scene" and long had been an admirer of former Indian prime minister Pandit Nehru, Sanjay's grandfather.

Amin's Family Flees: Uganda Near Collapse

AMIN

Times News Services

NAIROBI — President Idi Amin has evacuated his family from Uganda and foreign embassies close to his regime are sending home their nationals in expectation his government will collapse, diplomatic sources said today.

The sources said Amin sent an estimated 80 relatives on a Ugandan Airways jetliner to Tripoli, Libya, on Tuesday.

The diplomats said that the only real support that Ami appeared to be enjoying in the country now comes from 2,500 Nubians who serve as mercenaries in the army and the security forces.

As the crisis in the country mounted, Ugandan armed forces were said to be preparing a defense line 25 miles from Kamapala in a last-ditch effort to stop a Tanzanian invasion force from overrunning the country. But the sources said it appeared unlikely that the defense line would be very effective.

A Ugandan radio report Tuesday denied reports that one of Amin's elite military units had rebelled but the sources said mutinies seem to be spreading rapidly throughout the country, although no information was avilable on any specific unit.

Amin, meanwhile, sued for peace today in a broadcast message to five neighboring African countries.

On the official Uganda Radio, heard in Nairobi, Amin asked officials of Kenya, Zaire, Sudan, Rwanda and Burundi to try to persuade Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere to accept Organization of African Unity peace efforts.

Western diplomats reported by telephone that there appeared little that the dispirited Ugandan troops could to keep Tanzanian troops from moving on the capital of Kampala, about 210 kilometres north of the Tanzanian border. The diplomats said the city appeared calm.

Tax Cuts Didn't Work

Figures released this week by Statistics Canada must prove discouraging to politicians and economists looking for ways of stimulating the Canadian economy.

The figures are an analysis of the results of the tax cuts implemented by the federal and provincial governments last year. The cuts included reductions in provincial sales tax levels and a two-month income tax reduction for low and middle income families.

When the cuts were put into place, Finance Minister Jean Chretien said the government's aim was to stimulate consumer spending, and, it was hoped, stimulate the economy and eventually reduce unemployment.

But the Statistics Canada study shows that didn't happen at all. Consumers altered their buying patterns as a result of the changes, but they didn't spend more money.

Canadians took advantage of the lower tax rates by increasing significantly their spending on large costly items such as furniture and household appliances. Apparently people regarded the sales tax cuts especially as a real discount on these items.

They did not, however, reduce their savings to make these purchases as the government had hoped they would. Instead, they reduced their buying of smaller items.

Spending on "non-durables" — the economists' technical term for quickly consumed items such as food — barely increased in real terms during the year.

The federal agency's explanation is that the impact of the tax cuts was offset by increases in the cost of living, especially in food prices, and by rising interest rates.

"These increases served not only to squeeze the real income of consumers, but supported a continuing high rate of personal savings," said StatsCan.

This explanation is probably quite correct. Short-term government measures were not accepted by Canadians as a reason for abandoning their hard-earned savings.

They remained convinced — perhaps fairly, perhaps unfairly — that inflation will continue to be a problem, that things are likely to get worse instead of better, that they may need today's money in the future. They were willing to take what advantage they could of the temporary tax cuts, but not at the expense of their long-term savings.

The message that governments must take from this is that it will be very difficult to stimulate the economy, to ease unemployment. Canadians are not likely to co-operate in this matter until they see inflation and government spending being brought under control, until they can be assured that they will not be hurt by spending instead of saving.

In short, the traditional methods of economic stimulation — essentially more tax cuts of various types — will probably not work. Far more basic changes will be needed in our economic policies before Canadians will be willing to take a chance on their own economy.

Going After Gobbledygook

The provincial government gathers too much information from the governed, according to Deregulation Minister Sam Bawlf, who is pledged to slash red tape and deflate bloated bureaucracy. He said last month that all B.C. government correspondence will have to be in simple language, free of jargon and phrases unintelligible to the average person.

"Regulations are too often written by the legal profession with the legal profession in mind," said the minister. "You give a lawyer a regulation to write, and he'll use a $10 word where he needs a 50 cent word. We've got to get back to the basics."

Such populist sentiments will be endorsed by every devotee of the English language. But Bawlf has a job and a half ahead of him. A casual perusal of The B.C. Gazette, the government's official organ which publishes cabinet orders, tenders, proclamations, changes of name and other administrative odds and ends, is enough to convince that the government is near the terminal stages of jamming up in its own paper.

For example, the latest issue contains an order extending the jurisdiction of the Courtenay fire department; in the language of municipal government, Queen Elizabeth grants additional letters patent. It is a simple enough procedure, carried out regularly by officials of the municipal affairs department.

Form and legal niceties must be observed. But are 5,000 words required to do the job? Lincoln gave the Gettysburg address in less than 250 scribbled on the back of an envelope. Canada declared war in 1939 in a lot less.

Courtenay firemen obtain the authority to fight fires in a district enlarged to include "all and singular those parcels or tracts of land situate, lying, and being as follows:

"Firstly—Commencing at the northwest corner of the northeast corner of section 22, Township 9, Comox District . . . " And so on, et cetera for nine more columns of the Gazette down to "Lot 32 of Block 29, Comox District, Registered Plan 2287 on file in the land registry office Victoria."

All of this is a legal and technical requirement before Courtenay firemen can fight fires in the "northwest corner of the northeast corner" etc. But could not a simple sketch map suffice? Is it really necessary to print holus bolus a 5,000-word description in which none but the lawyers and surveyors who prepared it have any interest?

There must be an easier way to allow Courtenay firemen to get on with the job.

Go It Alone

John Reid, minister of state for federal-provincial relations, made an important point in the House of Commons on Feb. 9, with which I thoroughly agree. So far as I know, it has never appeared in the media so my hope is that you will permit me to quote it here as follows:

"As honorable members are well aware, at the present time the legal situation is that if the House of Commons and Senate pass an address praying that the British parliament pass amendments to the British North America Act, in fact the British parliament will not look behind the address to ensure the provinces of Canada have agreed to such an address. Their position is that the power to make constitutional amendments affecting the division of powers is that of the federal government. That is the constitutional provision as it exists today in the BNA Act."

This is a far cry from the nonsense talked about the sovereignty of provinces and the need for each one to give its consent before any amendment can be made. For 52 years the provinces have been trying to agree on a new constitution and have gotten no nearer to agreement than when they first started 52 years ago in 1927. We cannot be sure of greater success in the next half century so surely it is time to break the logjam and let Parliament take over once again the powers assigned to it by the BNA Act as they did many times in the early days of our union.

As a start such an address should at least provide for the patriation of the constitution with an amending formula and, if nothing better can be provided, they might even settle for the one in the Victoria Charter. — F. L. P. Anderson, 409-2174 Cadboro Bay Road.

There's Problem

We are told by Carol Pickup that the Greater Victoria school board has established a bare-bones budget for 1979, she has also expressed the view that "lay people from municipal councils would have difficulty in understanding the complexity of school board budgets." So, in order that all you dumb people out there may have some better understanding of why your taxes continue to rise, let us examine some of these "complexities."

In 1970, the peak enrolment year, there were 32,643 students, the budget was $22.4 million and the cost per pupil was $686. In 1979, there will be about 22,800 students, the budget is $45 million and the cost per pupil is $1,980. Now that isn't too difficult to follow is it? In other words, during nine years the cost of education has doubled while the number of students has declined by one-third.

During this same period, academic achievement has declined, classroom discipline has deteriorated, inadequate teachers have become more difficult to remove, solid application of a core curriculum has withered on the vine and administrative costs have skyrocketed. Yet we still have school board members who, with their heads firmly buried in the sand, cling to the demonstrably false belief that more money buys better education.

My difficulty is understanding why the board needs to spend $7 million on administration. Why are the highest-paid people in the educational hierarchy the board administrators, the minister's senior staff and the executive staff of the B.C. Teachers' Federation? I guess that means that the most important people on the educational scene are the bureaucrats, the administrators and the union. How about that? There's your problem right there! — Ian Cass, 3844 Merriman Drive.

What's Union Say?

If my memory serves me correctly when we suffered from the telephone strike a couple of years ago, one of the bones of contention put forward by the union was objection to the company purchasing equipment from an agency other than a subsidiary of the company which would result in associate union members being deprived of this employment.

Recent press releases indicate that Gary Lauk of the NDP is objecting to the fact the B.C. Tel has announced acquisition of GTE Automatic Electric and GTE Lenkurt Electric Ltd.

This is described as "patriation of two wholly-owned subsidiaries of a U.S. company to British Columbia."

Mr. Lauk describes this action as "a diabolical scheme" and he further states B.C. Tel is now being forced to buy with our citizens' telephone bills Automatic Electric from GTE and never again will it be able to shop around for the best equipnent deal.

Is it possible the NDP is having a change of heart and prefers shopping around for the best deal regardless of other factors such as employee security?

While I have no great respect for B.C. Tel and feel this service should be governmental in character, as in our neighbouring provinces, I would appreciate the B.C. Tel union giving their viewpoint with regard to this matter. — K.R. Burns, 401-640 Dallas Road.

GERALD GODIN

This Song's Been Playing a Long Time

Mr. Godin is a Parti Quebecois member of the Quebec national assembly.

The Pepin-Robarts report is formal: "Our country is plunged into "a crisis graver than any it has known before." This is February, 1979. Between you and me, that same tune has been on the hit parade for a very long time!

In 1887, on the occasion of the twentieth anniversary of Confederation, Premier Honore Mercier of Quebec invited the provincial premiers of the seven provinces of Canada to take part in the first interprovincial conference in Canadian history. Five of them accepted and it was held in Quebec City. That was almost a century ago.

I want to quote two documents of that period. First, one of the resolutions passed by that conference said: The provinces should select their own representatives in the Senate in such a manner that the provincially-appointed senators would constitute half the Senate . . .

Wave of Discontent

Second, in La Verite, on the first of July, 1887, the political commentator Jules-Paul Tardivel wrote a piece to mark the anniversary: "The 20th anniversary of the Confederation has generated very little enthusiasm. That political work is already on the verge of collapsing . . . We probably are on the eve of important political changes. The coming interprovincial conference will be very meaningful. If, after that conference, the provinces obtain some modifications making their situation more tolerable, the Confederation will last many years. If the conference fails to give results, we do not think the first of July will be a legal holiday 10 years from now."

As everyone knows, it has endured. And the nominative process of the Senate is still the same today as in 1867.

In 1936, Father Theophile Hudon, another political commentator, published a book called Is It the End of Confederation? He wrote: "A wave of discontent is unfurling all over Quebec. Complaints, recriminations, protests are vehemently expressed . . . Many are saying Confederation was a trap, and it is now bringing up cruel disappointments . . Since cracks and crevices are widening, it is high time to rouse alarm."

This was 43 years ago — two years before I was born.

In 1965, the report of the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism said: "Everything we have seen and heard has convinced us Canada is going through the most critical period of its existence since Confederation. We believe we are in the midst of a crisis: The time has come for decisions and real changes."

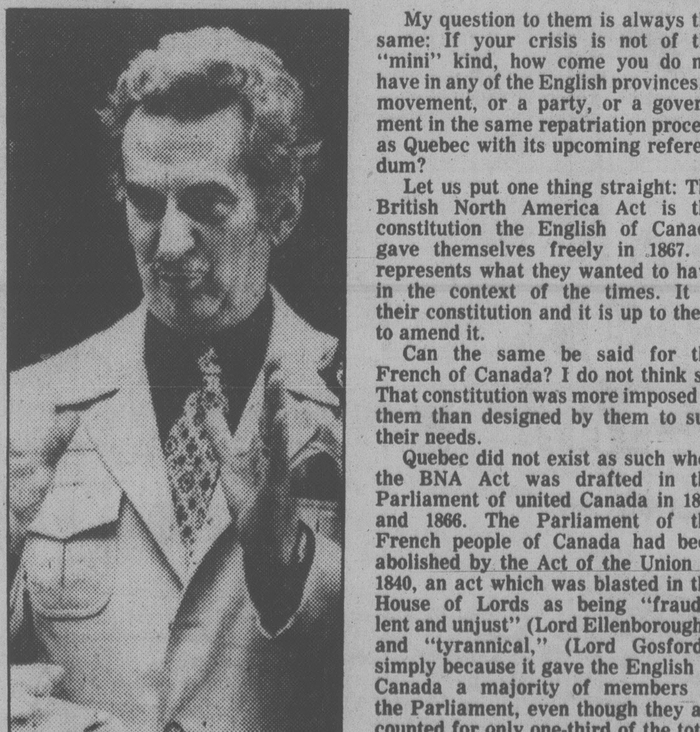
And it concluded by saying that too many English-Canadians are not conscious of the very existence of such a crisis.

The Pepin-Robarts report says almost the same thing: Today, many months after the victory of the Parti Quebecois, "in the minds of many Canadians, the importance [of the crisis] is on the decrease."

Could it be that there are two kinds of crisis in Canada? One big crisis between the two founding races — as they were called in the House of Commons in London in 1791 — and a series of mini-crises between the provinces and the central government? The former being the real one and the latter mere manifestations of regional dynamisms, needs, aspirations as they exist in every country, nation, state or confederation anywhere else in the world?

Most of the mini-crises can be solved through an amendment formula based on 80 per cent of the population or seven of the provinces, a majority mentioned in the last federal-provincial conference. But Quebec would probably never go for such a formula, simply because, if a few years from now, even if Quebec accounted for only 19 per cent of the population, it would still have the same deep-rooted national goal of self-government.

So here we are, confronted with domestic English-Canadian problems that Quebec prevents from being solved; and on the other hand, the Quebec-Canada problem that the other provinces prevent from being solved in the name of the "no special status" principle.



Task force chairman Pepin.

The big crisis is embodied in the existence in Quebec of a government committed to a referendum on repatriation of taxes and legislative powers from Ottawa to Quebec.

Such a commitment does not exist anywhere else even though one hears, from Vancouver to Moncton, some pundits saying, "You know, we also have grudges against Ottawa," implying no solution could be found in the Quebec-Ottawa dead end without at the same time solving the mini-crisis.

My question to them is always the same: If your crisis is not of the "mini" kind, how come you do not have in any of the English provinces, a movement, or a party, or a government in the same repatriation process as Quebec with its upcoming referendum?

Let us put one thing straight: The British North America Act is the constitution the English of Canada gave themselves freely in 1867. It represents what they wanted to have in the context of the times. It is their constitution and it is up to them to amend it.

Can the same be said for the French of Canada? I do not think so. That constitution was more imposed to them than designed by them to suit their needs.

Quebec did not exist as such when the BNA Act was drafted in the Parliament of united Canada in 1865 and 1866. The Parliament of the French people of Canada had been abolished by the Act of the Union of 1840, an act which was blasted in the House of Lords as being "fraudulent and unjust" (Lord Ellenborough), and "tyrannical," (Lord Gosford), simply because it gave the English of Canada a majority of members in the Parliament, even though they accounted for only one-third of the total population.

Because it was drafted by the Parliament of the union, the BNA Act is discredited from the outset as a so-called democratic exercise.

In fact, the French of Canada were a majority of population from 1760 up until 1850. They lived under three constitutions during that period: The Quebec Act in 1774, the Constitutional Act of 1791 and the Act of the Union in 1840. All of them were sketched and passed in London. They were not indigenous constitutions. And all of them made sure the "new subjects," as the French were called, would not be in control of the essential powers of a goverment.

The Parliament of 1792 in Quebec was tutored by the legislative council, appointed by the king. The Parliament of the Union stripped the French of their majority status. And it was only when the English of Canada were a majority that London allowed her colony in Canada to give itself its own constitution and Confederation in 1867. And ever since, the seeds of cynicism have been in the consciousness of Quebecers about democracy "a l'anglaise."

We never were given or had the chance to give ourselves what could be called a "French North America Act;" or a constitution suiting our needs and enabling us to build the kind of society we wanted to etablish. All these years, half of our tax base has been in Ottawa and half the legislative powers that constitute a government have been in Ottawa. We want them back here in Quebec and the referendum is designed to allow the Quebec government to do just that.

It Will Clear Sky

The Parti Quebecois government's main contribution to the Canadian crisis is a very simple thing: it is shifting the crisis from the sphere of politics and bringing it into the sphere of law, and in so doing, proposing an acceptable way out of the crisis. In the sphere of politics the Quebec nation is a minority and its status depends on the good will of the majority. In the sphere of law, Quebec would become a majority deciding for itself what constitution it wants.

Citizens respect a constitution only as much as they freely choose it. The BNA Act is a constitution freely chosen by English Canadians and they respect it. Quebecers do not because they did not have freedom of choice about it. The referendum will give them that freedom and then the sky over all of Canada will clear up because the big crisis will have been solved and there will be time left to solve the mini-crisis. And there will be an amending formula allowing the English provinces to modify and adapt their constitution without having Quebec as the permanent stumbling block.

That is what appeared more manifest than ever in the last federal-provincial conference.

Ugly Canadians Under Fire

By NORMAN WEBSTER

LONDON — It is that time of year again. The Newfoundland seal hunt begins soon and Canadians abroad are starting to hunker down for the storm. The people in the High Commission here are counting the days until the annual bomb threat, while travellers put away their maple leaves and pad around Europe hoping to be taken for Americans rather than those bloodthirsty savages who bash baby seals to death.

Yes, black-eye month will soon be upon us — that annual period when Canada receives brickbats from much of the civilized world.

The seal hunt probably does more to besmirch our international image than every other terrible thing our governments, people or travelling hockey players manage to do the rest of the year.

This year should be no exception. Greenpeace kicked off its anti-sealing campaign here the other day by bringing together nine organizations, including the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, to denounce the hunt. The organizations are asking the British government to ban the importation of seal pelts, most of which are re-exported from here to other countries.

They plan to drive the message home hard. There will be a huge demonstration in Trafalgar Square, across from Canada House, on the day the hunt opens.

There will be plenty of gruesome posters reproducing what may be the best-known photograph in the world today — the shot taken on the ice in 1968 by a Daily Mirror photographer. It shows a hairy brute with up-raised club about to smash an adorable whitecoat.

That certainly won't be all. Allan Thornton of Greenpeace promises, "This year will see the largest and most well-organized protest that has ever taken place against the Canadian seal hunt." He refuses to give details, but considering that previous protests have included everything up to Brigitte Bardot, it probably is no idle threat.

The protesters have been emboldened by the success here of their campaign last fall against a major slaughter of grey seals in the Orkney Islands. Harassment of the seal-cullers on the scene, plus a barrage of propaganda in the media, brought a cave-in by the British government. The kill was scaled down dramatically, and the Greenpeacers, led by Vancouver's David McTaggart, danced in victory.

The Canadian government has proved to be a much tougher nut to crack: Despite more than a decade of street theatre on the ice, bloody television film and virulent attacks, it continues to sanction the annual hunt.

This year's quota has been set at 170,000 harp seals. The government maintains this is based on solid evidence about a herd of healthy size (about 1.3 million adult animals). The opponents say the kill is dangerously high.

The differences persist on the other main points. Ottawa says the annual hunt is important to the local economy; Greenpeace says it is peanuts. Ottawa insists that the killing of the seal pups is humane even if far from esthetically appealing; the RSPCA calls the slaughter "pitiless and uncivilized."

In its counter-campaign, the Canadian High Commission is circulating the results of a U.S. investigation of alternative methods to the primitive club on the head. It notes gruesomely that the following were investigated: electrocution, bolt pistols, gunshots, gas chambers, decapitation, carbon dioxide and nitrogen asphyxiation, drug paralysis, acoustical shock, gaseous anesthetics, injectable drugs, ultrasonic and laser systems, thermal neurological destruction, pneumatic compression and impaction techniques.

None proved better than the clubbing and bleeding which produce such inflammatory television images.

Last year Newfoundland Premier Frank Moores flew over to confront the protesters personally. This year he has stayed at home, but magazine writer Sandra Gwyn, a Newfoundlander, is on hand here at the provincial government's expense asking awkward questions of the hunt's opponents.

The ones that really make them splutter are those that suggest the seal hunt is an easy emotional target which brings in members and cash in large amounts. "A most atrocious slur," snaps the RSPCA.

Maybe, but certainly no worse than the abuse which flows from the mouths and pens of some protesters. For example, an article in Animal Welfare magazine, distributed at the Greenpeace press conference.

From it we learn about "this barbaric annual rite" indulged in by "atavistic Newfoundlanders," also known as "late stone-agers". There's a lot of that going around, and things are just warming up. Here we go again.

There's More Money in Protesting than Seal-Hunting

By PETER MOON
The Globe and Mail

When the annual harp seal hunt begins off the north coast of Newfoundland next month, one of the highest-paid men at the front will be the one who has made the kill the centre of world-wide protest.

He is Brian Davies, executive director of the International Fund for Animal Welfare, an organization founded 10 years ago to protest against the killing of seals. Only a few scientific observers and an occasional wealthy protester are likely to earn more than the $55,000 a year IFAW pays Davies.

If Davies gets permission from the Canadian government to attend the kill, he will do it in style, piloting himself to and from the hunt in IFAW's jet helicopter and staying in a comfortable motel room in St. Anthony.

It will be a style different from that of the Newfoundland seal hunters. From cramped quarters aboard the old sealing vessels, the hunting parties set out daily in any kind of weather on to the sea ice to find the seals.

Few seal hunters earn more than $2,000 for their efforts. But the publicity generated by protests against the hunt brings in more than $1 million a year in donations to IFAW.

Davies is the best known of the seal protesters and always has been ready to talk about seals and the need to ban the hunt. But he is less ready to discuss what the seals mean financially to him and to IFAW.

Seal-hunt defenders like Premier Frank Moores of Newfoundland claim Davies has become rich through his opposition to the hunt. Tom Hughes, executive vice-president of the Ontario Humane Society, and one of Davies' most vocal critics, says: "He's the wealthiest sealer in Canada. He's made more money than all the sealers put together."

"It just bores me when people say these things," Davies said in a recent interview, seated behind an executive-sized desk at his office in the 150-year-old former sea captain's house in Yarmouth Port, Mass., now the headquarters for IFAW. "It doesn't matter what you write, there'll be people who will say, 'Brian Davies is a crook.' "

Davies at first refused to show IFAW's income tax returns, but after meeting his lawyer in Boston he gave The Globe and Mail copies of some of IFAW's U.S. tax returns.

DAVIES
. . . $55,000 a year

They show remarkable financial success.

Founded by Davies in Fredericton in 1969 as a one-man charitable organization, IFAW now employs 10 people: Davies and seven office staff in Yarmouth Port and two organizers in England.

In 1973 donations and other revenue totalled $513,334. Revenues since then have been: 1974, $805,141; 1975, $820,323; 1976, $1,020,828; 1977, $1,267,826; and for 1978, an estimated $1.3 million.

In 1975, Davies was paid $34,161. In 1977, he earned $48,757. His 1978 T4 slips show a total income of $55,000, of which $45,000 is salary and the remainder money put into a new registered-retirement savings plan.

And his worth? Davies puts it at a modest $25,000. Affidavits filed on his behalf with a Massachusetts court last year as part of his pending divorce action support his estimate. They say that until 1975 he never earned more than $20,000 a year, although they note that his wife, Joan, worked for IFAW for $100 a week.

The affidavits say the marriage broke up because of the time he spent travelling for IFAW and the resulting change in his style of living. They show that if the marriage had not broken up the Davies would now have a combined worth of about $250,000.

Born in Wales 43 years ago, Davies migrated to Canada in 1955 and joined the Canadian army. He was a lance-corporal when he joined the New Brunswick Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals in 1961 at a salary of $4,500. He began his crusade to stop sealing when the Canadian government asked him to observe the hunt off the Magdelene Islands in 1965. He was horrified by what he saw.

Davies started IFAW in 1969 and largely because of his initial efforts the annual seal hunts off Newfoundland and in the Gulf of the St. Lawrence are subject to world-wide protest. The U.S. and Italy now forbid the importing of sea fur.

IFAW's financial statements show it spends, depending on the year, from a third to half its income opposing the seal hunt. Administration and the cost of raising money account for 30 per cent and the rest of its annual income goes to a variety of projects, including a broad program of public education on animal welfare.

In the past five years it has spent more than $2 million opposing the seal hunt. The 1977 financial statement details the spending of $465,661 in its anti-seal campaign. Included in that amount was $42,893 for travel, $93,410 for publicity and $83,185 on flight training for Davies (a qualified helicopter pilot), aircraft operation and the cost of aircraft rental for seal observation.

IFAW was a registered charitable organization in Canada until it gave up its tax-exempt money to conduct what the government saw as a political lobby to stop the seal hunt. IFAW moved its operations to the U.S. where it continues to enjoy registered charity status.

A number of other animal welfare and conservationist organizations are now devoting increasing amounts of their time and budget to Canadian seals. The Fund for Animals of New York, for example, says it will spend $250,000 opposing the hunt this year. Others working actively against it include the Greenpeace Foundation of Vancouver and Britain's Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Davies does not like to detail exactly how he raises money because he says there is only so much money available and he does not want his "competitors" to know the secrets of his success.

The money just flows in. IFAW has 90,000 so-called members in Canada and the United States, 20,000 in Britain, 5,500 in the Netherlands, 3,000 in France "and a scattering in other places," he said. Members don't pay a membership fee, but donate what they wish. In return they get half a dozen newsletters a year. The letters always contain donation forms.

Some people in the animal welfare business have scathing comments about the amount of money IFAW raises and the salary Davies is voted each year by his two fellow directors, two Fredericton residents who receive no remuneration.

"Because you are working in this field you shouldn't have to take less money than somebody working in another field," said Davies. "I think one of the critical weaknesses in the animal-welfare movement is that we're not paying the kinds of salaries that will attract well-paid professionals. And I consider myself a professional.

"I did it when I had to work for a lot less. But I've built up, with the help of others, an international organization . . . with a cash flow in excess of a million dollars and I would expect that within three years it will be a multi-million dollar organization."

Just how effective has Brian Davies and IFAW been?

Dr. Keith Ronald, dean of biological science at the University of Guelph and chairman of the federal government's advisory committee on seals and sealing, is a man who believes there is a place for a properly-managed seal hunt, but calls himself "one of Brian Davies' better defenders."

He said in an interview that when Davies first saw the seal hunt with Tom Hughes of the Ontario Humane Society in the Gulf of St. Lawrence in 1965 there was considerable cruelty and seals were being killed without any real government supervision.

"Tom Hughes went through the Canadian Federation of Humane Societies and the government, whereas Brian Davies broke away from the humane societies . . . I certainly think Brian had a positive effect on the seal hunt in the early years.

"But should he continue? I don't know. There are other agencies today doing what he started in a more efficient way and without the backlash he creates.

"Brian's working on other things now, manatees, alligators, that sort of thing. Maybe he should concentrate on those and leave the seals alone."

'First Citizen' of Republic?

By JACK NEWFIELD

(Newfield is a commentator on CBS Radio. This appeared in The Progressive)

Felix Frankfurter used to say that the highest office in a democracy was the office of citizen. The American who, I think, brings the most distinction to the office of citizen is Ralph Nader. But recently the media have been nit-picking Nader. It almost seems that we are made so uneasy by a really incorruptible hero that we must invent rumors that taint or trivialize Nader. An editor of The New Republic wrote a book exposing Nader for such sins as over-working his staff. When the consumer protection bill lost, The Washington Post blamed Nader's aggressive support. Since the media have the conformist instincts of blackbirds on a wire, nit-picking Nader has become a form of fashion.

In this climate, I think it is important to recall Nader's remarkable record of achievements in the public interest. His 1965 book on auto safety altered history. Since its publication, as a result of stricter performance standards and seat belts, the number of auto accident deaths per mile driven has been almost cut in half. Last year, Nader exposed the exploding gas tank of the Ford Pinto and the dangerous failure rate of Firestone tires.

Nader is responsible for helping to pass the Freedom of Information law, which gives citizens greater access to government records and helps reduce government secrecy.

NADER . . . remarkable record

Some of the nit-pickers claim Nader only exposes big business but ducks criticism of labor unions. This is disproved by Nader's vigorous and valuable support for PROD, the national coalition of insurgents trying to clean up and democratize the corrupt Teamsters Union.

Nader's critics suggest that he has fallen prey to the deadly sins of ambition and greed. But this, too, is untrue. Nader has never run for political office. He has rejected all government funding in order to preserve his independence. Unlike Bess Myerson and others, Nader has never compromised the consumer movement by accepting a corporate directorship or consultant's job.

Ralph Nader, in fact, may be the unlikely Zeitgeist for this age of austerity. He still lives in a small, $90-a-month apartment. His income from books, articles and lectures is about $250,000 a year: He lives on about $5,000 and uses the remaining money to hire more researchers and lawyers for his staff. The high office of Citizen of the Republic remains honorably occupied by Ralph Nader.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market slipped a bit further today in the aftermath of Tuesday's selloff.

Losers outnumbered gainers by a 3-to-2 margin in the over-all tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Blue-chip issues attracted some modest buying interest early in the session with the Dow Jones industrial average at its lowest level in two months. But the effort at a rally made little headway.

Gainers among recently-depressed issues included Polaroid, up ½ to $39⅞, and Boeing, up ¼ to $62⅜.

Narco Scientific tumbled 9¼ to $17 following word late Tuesday that Rorer Group had dropped plans to acquire the company. Rorer shares gained 1⅝ to $16⅝ in active trading.

Dome Petroleum, which proposed a 4-for-1 stock split, climbed 3⅜ to $96⅜ on the American Stock Exchange.

business

Cdn. Occidental

Canadian Occidental Petroleum Ltd. of Calgary showed a 23-per-cent increase in revenues during the year ended Dec. 31, 1978 and an 11-per-cent decrease in net income.

Comparative amounts for the prior year have been restated to give effect to the accounting change from the full cost method to the successful efforts method in the second quarter of 1978, the company said in a prepared statement.

Total revenues increased to $92,432,000 in 1978 from $75,155,000 in 1977, primarily because of improved revenues attributable to increased sales volumes of industrial chemicals higher and higher selling prices for oil, gas and chemical.

Net income fell to $13,433,000 in 1978 from the restated $15,154,000 in 1977. The company said earnings were adversely affected by increased operating expenses and the write-off of oxporation costs amounting to $11,131,000 in 1978, compared with $4,501,000 the year before.

Keg Rstnts.

Keg Restaurants Ltd. of Vancouver has reported net earnings for 1978 of $750,000 or 35 cents a share, compared with $600,000 or 25 cents a share in 1977.

Company president George Tidball said in a news release sales were $37.4 million, compared with $27.3 million the previous year.

Tidball said the sales reflect not only the addition of new restaurants, but increased dinners in almost all markets the Keg serves.

Keg now operates 36 steak, seafood and specialty restaurants in Canada and the United States.

Tidball said in 1979 two new restaurants will be opened in the Vancouver area, one in Victoria, one in Regina, two in Ontario and two in Seattle.

Mercantile Bk.

The Mercantile Bank of Canada reported a 46-per-cent increase in its balance of revenues to $5.7 million, or 71.7 cents a share in the first quarter ending Jan. 31. In the same period last year the bank earned $4.1 million. President Robert Davidson attributed the improvement to the continuing favorable gap between the income form money lent and the cost of obtaining funds.

Discrimination Hearing Moves to Youbou Mill

A one-man human rights inquiry into a woman's claim of discriminatory hiring by B.C. Forests Products moved today to BCFP's Youbou mill.

Company lawyer Stephen Kelleher told the inquiry he wanted the board to learn the nature of the work that Janice Foster, 24, wants to do.

Foster, who stands five feet and weighs 115 pounds, claims she was not hired by the company to work on the greenchain because of her height and weight despite the fact she has extensive experience working in mills.

The Human Rights Branch agreed she had been discriminated against and filed application for the hearing on her behalf.

J.W. Horn, representing the branch, opposed moving the inquiry from the legislative buildings in Victoria to the sawmill, saying he agreed work on the greenchain was arduous.

Earlier, he produced evidence that showed Foster had put in 74 working days on a greenchain for the Tahsis Company and had performed the work satisfactorily.

But board chairman Jim McPherson of the University of Victoria law faculty ruled the inquiry should visit the mill.

Foster first applied for work at Youbou in November, 1977, and checked with the company weekly after applying.

She said men who had applied after her were being hired by the mill. Then in January, BCFP personnel employee Wayne Ostrum told her she was 10 times more likely to get injured because of her height and weight.

She testified Ostrum did not tell her directly she would not be hired by the mill, but said he tried to dissuade her.

After filing a compalint with the human rights branch, Foster said she saw BCFP industrial relations supervisor Michael Mergens, who told her if he had two applicants before him — one five-foot eight inches and the other five feet — he would hire the larger person regardless of experience.

Human Rights investigator Alan Andison said Mergens confirmed this position on size when he talked with him.

Mergens said a second factor in the decision not to hire Foster was her work report from the Tahsis Company. (Foster earlier testified she quit the Tahsis mill when a promised leave of absence did not come through. She said that move on her part led to a "no rehire" when she reapplied after her holiday.)

The Branch has taken the position that the discrimination against Foster has led to a general policy by BCFP not to hire women because they are generally shorter and lighter than men.

The hearing continues.

Death Van Ran Red Light, Inquest Told

A coroner's inquest Tuesday night was told the driver of a van involved in a fatal accident at Cook and Johnson Jan. 26 sped through a red light before colliding with another vehicle.

Janice Campbell, 18, died at the scene after she was tossed out of the van and pinned against a lamp standard.

Constables Ross Swanton and Douglas Bond told the jury they had noticed the van leave a noisy house party at Higgins and Cedar Hill Road earlier in the evening and watched it go down Higgins in the direction of Hillside.

The accident occurred about 40 minutes later.

Swanton said the van was exceeding the speed limit and went through a red light at the intersection.

He said a "black dot" sign, indicating a high accident area. was facing the van as it approached the intersection.

Bond said about an hour after the mishap the driver of the van, Ronald Cheeke, 17, was given a breath analysis test and had blood-alcohol readings of .07 and .06 per cent.

In a previous session the jury was told Cheeke has been charged with dangerous driving.

Coroner Jorre de St. Jorre adjourned the inquest to March 5.

Stain Detects Cancer Cells

VANCOUVER (UPC) — Two University of British Columbia researchers have developed a non-surgical staining technique to detect victims of Canada's biggest killer, cancer of the colon.

Dr. Charles Culling, a UBC pathology professor said Tuesday he and Dr. B.E. Reid have developed a rectal mucus stain which distinguishes between healthy and cancer-infested cells.

"There are components in the colon unique to the body, and we have a staining method which stains cancer cells blue and normal cells red. That's been published and is recognized," Culling said.

Culling said the stain has been sucessfully used to detect cancer in hundreds of laboratory animals and that recently it was used to help surgeons locate colonic tumors in human patients on the operating table.

"There have been a dozen cases where we could tell the surgeon where the primary tumor was when it was extremely difficult to know," Culling said.

"In cases where the cancer has moved and is in several areas of the body, it is important to know where the cancer began," he said.

Culling said research teams are now testing the accuracy of the stain as a non-surgical tool for detecting colonic cancer in clinical situations.

"Instead of minor surgery we should be able to just take a swab," he said.

"We've done the laboratory tests, and now we're doing the clinical ones. It will be a while before we can say we've done it, but it is very promising ," he said.

If the clinical tests are positive, Dr. Culling said, it will be as easy to test for cancer of the colon as it is for women to be tested now by the pap smear for cancer of the cervix.

"I always wanted to be my own boss. But after ten months, I ran into a few problems. I didn't realize it at the time, but I was so involved in selling that I had little time for managing.

"Then a friend of mine suggested talking to the Federal Business Development Bank. I said I needed management assistance, not a loan. Still my friend insisted I contact the bank.

"I did. And got a lot of help I never expected to get from a bank. But this is no ordinary bank. Besides financial help, they provide a wide range of services geared to people like me who own or operate a small business. In my own case, I was able to hire one of their management counsellors for only $5 an hour (the bank paid the rest) through their Counselling Assistance to Small Enterprises (CASE). Believe me, it made a big difference."

This is one example of the many services we offer to thousands of small businesses throughout Canada. Services like CASE, management seminars and financial advice. Lochside Drive Extension Startles Saanich Planners

A provincial highways ministry proposal to extend Lochside Drive southward to bisect Royal Oak Drive and ultimately link up with Blenkinsop Road met stiff opposition from some Saanich aldermen Tuesday night.

Planning committee members were apparently surprised to see the proposed route extension marked on a transportation map which forms part of the latest draft of the community plan.

Assistant municipal planner Alan Hopper explained that the description of the dotted line on the map's legend as "future road" was possibly misleading, and that instead it should read "right-of-way reservation."

He said the proposal to extend Lochside originated with the highways ministry. While the road might not be built for many years, the ministry wanted to ensure land was reserved for that purpose.

"They wanted the option of making this a major route to relieve pressure on the Cordova Bay road system," said Hopper.

Ald. Irene Block, who failed to get committee support for a motion deleting any reference to an extension south of Royal Oak Drive, said the map's depiction of the route make it looks as if it's carved in stone.

Ald. Howard Sturrock said Block's suggestion to terminate Lochside at Royal Oak makes no sense from an engineering point of view, because it superimposes a north-south route on an east-west route.

But Sturrock said he also has difficulty in accepting the highways ministry's proposal because he is reluctant to see any more traffic directed to rural Blenkinsop Road.

The matter was tabled for a report from the municipal engineer.

At its usual slow pace the committee thrashed out agreement on the wording of two chapters of the community plan — transportation and residential development.

Further chapters dealing with municipal services and parks and recreation will be discussed tonight.

New Definition Eyed for Advisers

A more clearly defined role has been recommended for a citizens group which was established by Saanich council to provide advice on environmental issues.

The policy and management committee Tuesday suggested new terms of reference be drawn up for the dormant Citizens' Environmental Advisory Committee.

Aldermen agreed the advisory group had failed to act as a "sounding board" on environmental concerns within the community, partly because it lacked guidelines and objectives.

However, they rejected a suggestion from one of the group's members that it be composed of environmental experts.

Drop-in Planning for Cordova?

Saanich may take a leaf out of the city of Vancouver's planning book in attempting to draft an area plan for Cordova Bay.

Ald. Howard Sturrock suggested to council's policy and management committee Tuesday that the municipality establish a "store-front" planning office in the community, where residents tend to be divided into two camps on the question of sewers.

Residents would be able to drop in for a cup of coffee and an informal chat with planning staff, Sturrock said.

Their ideas and aspirations for the neighborhood could be distilled into some sort of community consensus over a period of several weeks.

Committee members liked the suggestion and instructed staff to consult Vancouver city officials for further information on how the store-front concept had been implemented there.

Once the proposal has been refined it will be referred to council's lands, planning and housing committee.

Fruit Packers Merge

VERNON (CP) — Two North Okanagan fruitpacking houses have merged in a move company spokesmen say is designed to increase the efficiency of both operations. The merger between B.C. Fruit Shippers Ltd. and Vernon Fruit Union became effective Monday with the new company to go under the latter name.

Pipe Hearings Set

OTTAWA (CP) — Public hearings will begin April 18 in Vancouver on an application by Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. to construct a natural gas gathering pipelines in northeastern B.C., the National Energy Board said Tuesday.

Outside Help?

VANCOUVER (CP) — It is ludicrous to believe that the meticulous planning of an escape attempt at the B.C. Penitentiary took place only inside the prison, a Crown prosecutor told a B.C. Supreme Court jury Tuesday. In delivering his summation at the trial of Betsy Wood and Gay Hoon, Charles Norris said the testimony of prisoners Andy Bruce and Stephen Hall was "a tissue of lies."

Murder Charged

PORT COQUITLAM (CP) — An 18-year-old man was charged Tuesday in connection with the stabbing death last Friday of a local taxi driver. Jeffrey Robert Timms of Port Coquitlam was charged with second-degree murder after being arrested Tuesday morning at Union Bay on Vancouver Island. The stabbing victim, Gregory Paul Belliveau, 22, apparently bled to death in his taxi after being knifed in the chest.

Water, Water Everywhere

VANCOUVER (UPC) - An elephant was trucked from the Vancouver Game Farm, 35 miles east of Vancouver, to a downtown film studio Tuesday to star in a television commercial for a locally-made waterbed.

Her handler led her from the truck onto the bed in front of a battery of cameras.

The bed, as expected, stood up to the strain. But the elephant didn't and without batting an eye, deposited more water on the bed than there was in it.

"She's nervous about being a television star," her handler explained as he led the elephant to a quiet corner while studio crews mopped furiously.

"She'll be better next time, and she won't do that again."

An hour later, the commercial was shot again. And this time the elephant didn't.

Management School Vetoed

KELOWNA (CP) — The Universities Council of B.C. has rejected a proposal by Simon Fraser University of Burnaby to establish a school of resource management here.

Dr. William Gibson, council chairman, said in Vancouver that several factors were considered, including SFU's lack of professional expertise in the field.

Gibson said in a letter to SFU president Dr. George Pederson that the council was concerned that the program's graduates might not find jobs with the qualifications offered by the school.

The school sought about $1 million annually as well as permanent buildings for a pilot project.

Gibson said the council "generally felt that it should support in the Interior something more viable than that proposed."

The program would have awarded bachelor of science degrees in resource management and forest resource management to students completing third and fourth-year level courses.

The school was scheduled to open this September.

Pederson said Tuesday he was disappointed with the decision because a great deal of time and effort had gone into preparing the proposal.

New Head Of Heroin Program

A visiting professor of psychology at the University of Quebec has been appointed director of B.C.'s heroin treatment program, the health ministry announced Tuesday.

The ministry, said in a news release that Jack Altman will take up his new duties in May.

Altman has a Ph.D in biopsychology from the University of Chicago.

Fish Giveaway Denied

VANCOUVER (UPC) — Federal Deputy Minister of Fisheries Donald Tansley has denied rumors of a "secret" treaty giving away some west coast fish resources to the United States for east coast concessions, and defended a proposed halibut agreement with the U.S.

"There is no secret trading of east coast boundaries for west, no allocating of foreign fishing quotas in return for Canadian wheat sales, nor any other of the phantom conspiracies with which some people cloud the air," Tansley said Tuesday.

The deputy minister said the government was not happy about the proposed agreement trading Canadian fishing rights in Alaska for groundfishing rights off the B.C. coast.

"We wanted to keep that Alaskan halibut fishery, an old and honorable fishery, for our fishermen. We tried and tried," he said.

But American negotiators had an "Alaska-for-the-Alaskans" attitude and the proposed trade-off is the best deal available, he said.

"We see no way to avoid losing Alaska halibut, but we will gain as much from groundfish as we loose in halibut — and in the long run, more," he said.

The groundfishing industry, safeguarded by the new agreement, employs more Canadians than halibut fishing, and the two-year phase-in period was a major U.S. concession, he said.

During the phase-in period "we should be considering what to do for about 50 halibut boats — the real losers," he said.

The government has organized a steering committee to help halibut fishermen find other fishing opportunities, Tansley said.

Before The Judge

A charge of soliciting was dropped in provincial court Tuesday after defence lawyer Brian MacKenzie suggested the Crown might have difficulty proving its case because of a year-old Supreme Court of Canada ruling which overturned a soliciting conviction in Vancouver.

MacKenzie was representing Lillian Palmantier of Vancouver, charged with soliciting and contributing to the juvenile delinquency of a 15-year-old girl.

The charges were from last year but Palmantier failed to show up for a court appearance and was arrested Thursday in Vancouver.

MacKenzie told Judge William Ostler the woman had intended to plead guilty to the soliciting charge but said he wanted to dissociate himself from that plea.

The Supreme Court ruling on the Hutt appeal might make it difficult for the Crown, MacKenzie added.

The February, 1978, ruling overturned the conviction of another Vancouver woman accused of soliciting an undercover policeman while she was in his car. The court ruled a car was not a public place and soliciting must be persistent to be proved.

Following the decision, Vancouver city police dropped 280 soliciting charges and did not lay any more until recently.

After requesting time to think about the case until the morning recess, Crown counsel Robert Mulligan entered stays of proceedings on all charges, including one of breaching her recognizance and Palmantier was released.

Ostler warned a Canadian Forces man if he persisted in his behavior he would be "turfed out."

Brian Hans Koster, 20, pleaded guilty to wilfully damaging a window at the Mayfair Motel, 650 Speed, on Dec. 21.

Mulligan said the owner of the motel was awakened at 2:45 a.m. by the sound of breaking glass and went out to investigate. He saw Koster running up a stairway and gave chase, catching Koster, who later told city police he was seeing a friend.

Ostler fined Koster $100 and also ordered him to pay for the damage.

An 18-year-old told Ostler he wasn't used to drinking whiskey and added, "I won't get that crazy any more, I promise."

Tony Clarke, 1406 Chambers, pleaded guilty to mischief causing wilful damage.

Court was told Clarke kicked in a large window valued at $298 at the Pay-N-Save gas station at 3477 Quadra on Jan. 20.

Mulligan said Clarke appeared to be drunk and was with some other youths.

Clarke said he didn't have any beer at a party but was given whiskey, which he was not used to drinking.

Ostler gave Clarke a suspended sentence, placed him on six months' probation and ordered him to perform 75 hours of community service work. He also ordered Clarke not to consume any alcohol except at his home and with his parents' consent during his probation.

Fined for drinking-driving were: Stirling Drew McNally, 20, of Abbotsford, $500; Robert Daniel Miller, 38, of 1961 Ashgrove, $500; Michael Ken Fortin, 28, of 974 Goldstream, $450; Kalman Mecseci, 46, of 1515 Vining, $450; Kevin Eugene Witt, 21, of 10070 Fifth in Sidney, $400; and Louis Gustav Planes, 51, of 1696 Whiffin Spit, $50.

In addition, Planes was ordered to perform 150 hours of community service work and was fined an additional $35 for driving without a valid driver's licence.

Botanist's Report Next In Thetis Lake Seesaw

A Fish and Wildlife Branch proposal to improve water storage in Thetis Lake went another round at Victoria's city hall Tuesday.

The matter has come before council's parks committee on a number of occassions and the last time up won approval. But when the recommendation came to council, at a night meeting last Thursday, there was some confusion over whether parks director Cliff Bate supported it.

So the entire matter was shipped back to the parks committee.

The committee endorsed the proposal for a second time, but added a rider stating council's support is subject to a satisfactory report by the Thetis Lake Nature Sanctuary Association. The nature group has hired a botanist to determine the environmental impact.

The proposal will see water levels maintained at the current winter level, but no additional water stored.

Bate told the committee that in the past the lake has been held at a level within a few inches of the Fish and Wildlife proposal without causing any significant environmental impact.

Fish and Wildlife spokesman Chris Dodd agreed.

But the nature group still wasn't happy and asked for a month to get a botanist's report.

The committee eventually agreed to give the botanist until March 22, because the Fish and Wildlife Branch is working to a March 31 deadline.

The branch wants to control the outflow from Thetis Lake so that water can be released slowly into Craigflower Creek.

HOSPITAL BUDGET RESTRICTIONS:

They're going to cost us our jobs.

They could cost you your life.

Last year our Union was awarded a contract which was the product of the Essential Services Disputes Act, legislation enacted by the provincial government.

That contract guaranteed us an eight per cent increase in pay and benefits for 1979.

After that contract was awarded, the same provincial government told British Columbia's hospital boards they couldn't increase their 1979 budgets by more than five per cent over last year's.

That's not enough to keep up with inflation, let alone pay the wage increases promised to us and our fellow hospital workers.

Something has to give . . . and that something, at most hospitals, is our jobs. People are being laid off, or aren't being replaced when they retire or quit.

The figures vary, but the provincial average could be as high as one in every 10 health care workers losing their jobs, or not being replaced, in 1979.

That concerns us, for obvious reasons: these are, after all, our jobs, our means of making a living; and we care about health care.

It may surprise you to learn it also concerns most hospital boards and administrators, our employers, people who are every bit as concerned as we about budget restrictions and the lowered standard of patient care they must inevitably bring about.

Who's going to be the real loser in this round of election money games?

You are. You're the one who could desperately need that tenth worker when you, or your loved ones, must be in hospital this year. You're the one who isn't going to get the care that tenth worker could offer.

Think about it. Go to the next meeting of your hospital board and ask the trustees there about it. Then write to Robert McClelland, the Minister of Health . . . tell him what you think about it.

Tax Tips '78

Tax Tips are prepared for the Victoria Times by Revenue Canada. Detailed tax information can be obtained from the local Revenue Canada office, 1415 Vancouver St. by phoning 386-2176 between 8:15 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Monday to Friday.

Q. What is a "proper" receipt?

A. A "proper" receipt is the official receipt issued by an organization for income tax purposes. Photocopies and cancelled cheques are not normally accepted by the department as proper receipts.

Q. What is a Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan?

A. Registered Home Ownership Sayings Plan (RHOSP) were introduced in 1974 to help Canadians save money for the purchase of a home. It allows you to deduct up to $1,000 a year in contributions to a life-time maximum of $10,000. Investment income of an RHOSP is accumulated tax-free and when you wish to withdraw all your funds to purchase a home, the funds are received tax-free to the extent that they are used for this purpose. You will be able to claim a deduction for the purchase of your owner-occupied home up to three years after you withdraw your funds. For more information about RHOSPs see Item 23 in your 1978 Tax Guide or ask your local taxation office for the pamphlet "Registered Home Ownership Saving Plan".

Q. My husband died before he retired. Is his R.R.S.P. considered his income or mine?

A. The value of the R.R.S.P. should be included in computing your husband's income in the year of his death. However, if you become entitled to the proceeds of his R.R.S.P., you can defer tax by transferring the amount into your own R.R.S.P.

Q. I realize that in the calendar year I turn 71 I must withdraw funds I paid into my Registered Retirement Savings Plans. I have heard that one way I can defer paying tax on this withdrawal is to transfer all or part of the funds into a Registered Retirement Income Fund. Would you please elaborate.

A. You can transfer all or part of the funds from your RRSP to an RRIF anytime after you have turned sixty years of age and before the end of the calendar year in which you turn 71. This new fund will provide benefits in increasing amounts each year until your 90th birthday. The life of a RRIF is equal to 90 minus your age or your spouse's age, if he or she is younger.

Q. Can I have more than one Registered Retirement Income Fund in my lifetime?

A. No, you are limited to one RRIF. However you may transfer your fund from one RRIF trustee to another.

Talks Set On Skagit

Seattle city officials plan to meet April 3 with Environment Minister Rafe Mair to resume negotiations on raising of the Ross Dam.

"This will be the first time a minister has sat in on a meeting," said lawyer Ed Wood, one of the Seattle negotiators.

Deputy Mayor Bob Royer said he also wants to set up a face-to-face meeting between Mayor Charles Royer and Premier Bill Bennett.

Raising the dam would provide 42 megawatts of firm power for Seattle City Light. The city now uses an average of 860 megawatts of firm power a day.

Negotiators from the province and the city have met several times since B.C. and Seattle agreed in 1976 to consider an arrangement for the city to purchase electricity rather than raise the dam under an earlier agreement, flooding 4,800 acres of land in Canada.

The city and province agree that Seattle should be able to get substitute power, but negotiators have been unable to agree on how to provide the power.

War May Spread—Soviets

fensive and Vice-Premier Teng Hsiao-ping's visit to the United States, the U.S. stand had contributed to Peking's "openly taking the path of war."

Treasury Secretary Blumenthal indicated also today the United States may be placing some validity on China's contention that its 12-day-old war with Vietnam may be over soon.

After his meeting with the Chinese premier, Blumenthal said Hua assured him the fighting would be a "limited operation" of "limited duration."

Blumenthal told reporters that China's longstanding position it will leave Vietnam soon "must be taken seriously and I have so reported" to the White House.

He said the Chinese have given him such assurances "repeatedly" during his five-day stay in the Chinese capital. It was the first time, however, that the treasury secretary had publicly indicated the United States may be taking the claims seriously.

On the battlefront, Vietnam reported today it put a Chinese regiment and two battalions out of action in the northeast province of Lang Son, where anaylysts believe the armies are regrouping for a decisive battle in the border war.

Meanwhile, Peking said small Vietnamese units had penetrated 10 to 15 kilometres into China at three points but that all incursions were repulsed.

The Voice of Vietnam reported that more than 1,600 Chinese troops were killed in the Lang Son area Tuesday, but did not give the exact location of the fighting.

Analysts said the provincial capital, also called Lang Son, had not fallen to the Chinese but that Vietnamese civilians had been evacuated. The city of Lang Son is 120 km. northeast of Hanoi and 15 km. south of the Chinese border.

Fraud In Grants Charged

ferred, but no one was fired, Cossitt said. About three-fourths of those who were offered $20 in plain envelopes turned down the offer to become involved in the illegal scheme, he added.

Cossitt was refused the unanimous consent necessary to have the Commons debate his allegations of kickbacks in the awarding of grants to the CCCJ.

In addition to a number of Toronto businessmen, he said the following people have resigned from the council recently: Paul Hellyer, former cabinet minister who now is a journalist; Jerry Yanover, legislative assistant to deputy prime minister Allan MacEachen; Ludovic Hudon, a CBC official and Keeping.

Cossitt said there was "very definitely" a connection between these resignations and his own allegations of public service kickbacks.

Chemainus Mill Closed By Inventor's Protest

factured by a number of companies and is not necessarily Standal's design.

He said this is the reason the company turned down Standal's offer to give the company the patents for $200,000.

"There is no commercial value to them because there are a zillion people manufacturing that equipment."

One patent lawyer in Vancouver told Standal it would cost $100,000 just to start on his case but Standal said "I don't have that kind of chicken feed to play with."

He said he was given legal advice that as an individual he had no hope of winning against the big companies. The only chance he had was if others became involved.

So he thought that if he closed the mills which were using his chipper equipment he would adversely affect the provincial economy and then get some action.

He said he won't likely stay at Chemainus too long because he doesn't want to cause the employees there too much trouble.

He said he might hit MacBlo's mill in Harmac next.

Roger Stanyer, president of the Duncan local of the IWA, said Standal's problem is not a union matter.

"But hell if the workers want to stand by George Standal, the union supports that.

"I am satisfied he has a legitimate beef against whoever is manufacturing the equipment."

Standal said the chipper head and knives cut slabs from logs into chips.

"They'll speed up a mill anywhere from 10 to 35 per cent," he said. "It almost revolutionizes the sawmill industry."

But the real money-makers, said Standal, are the replaceable knives.

"It's like a Gillette razor," he said. "You sell the razor, then you make all the money selling blades. It's a gold mine."

You'd Be Surprised Who Buys Used Clothing

Recycling is no longer just a novel idea.

For many people nowadays it is a necessity, a way of life. Particularly when it comes to clothing.

With the drop in value of the dollar and the ever-rising cost of living, places like Goodwill and St. Vincent de Paul and stores such as the Nearly New Shop on Shelbourne and Oak Bay's Second Debut are being used more and more by a wide cross-section of the community.

And now there is Round-A-Bout, a used clothing store with a difference.

I first met Rosemary Cardinal on New Year's Day as she jogged along the cliffs on Dallas Road during the annual health run from the YM-YWCA where husband Tom is the associate adult program director. Now this mother of two small children, accompanied by her mother Rosemary Stewart, is jogging into something entirely different. It's a store specializing in good quality used children's clothes and maternity wear.

Actually, the two Rosemarys opened their store in cramped quarters upstairs at the corner of View and Vancouver on Dec. 1.

"That room was so tiny, in fact, and we did so much business just before Christmas that we had people waiting in the hallway to get in!" the younger Rosemary explains.

And so they have just moved into a much larger area next door where the relaxing decor and some neat clothes stands (built by the local Charadhras carpentry firm) give it more the air of an expensive boutique.

Embarking on her first commercial venture after coming here from Winnipeg five years ago, Rosemary Cardinal sells everything from newborn nighties and sleepers right up to size 14 blue jeans and jumpsuits.

"We advertise four days a week in the Victoria Press classifieds and sell on consignment for our customers on a 50-50 basis," she explains. "And because the prices are so low, most people selling things here turn around and use the money in the store, too."

Rosemary emphasizes, though, that they advertise for quality used children's clothing.

"We don't have time to be sewing and mending and the stuff on the racks is so good that people don't have to come in and check all the seams carefully," she says.

Demand is high right now for children's clothing, Rosemary says.

"And for maternity wear, too. For the short time that you wear this change of wardrobe, it's just not worth buying many new things. And now that most families are only having two children, things don't get worn out as much as they did when people had big families and you got your money's worth out of maternity wear."

Contrary to what you might think, the majority of the customers using a store like Round-A-Bout are not welfare recipients.

"They are just consumer-conscious people, many of whom can afford to shop at the kiddie boutiques but say they don't want to any more and are glad there's an alternative," Rosemary says.

Though the venture looks like taking off now, the mother and daughter team don't think their used children's clothes store would have been so popular two or three years ago.

"Then, people seemed to be fooling themselves, turning their heads and saying 'things will get better,'" says Rosemary Cardinal. "But now, people are starting to realize they're not getting better and they are more aware of how they spend their money."

Recycling children's clothes isn't new, of course. Most of us parents have been handing down things and exchanging them with friends for years. Only now you can do the same thing with friends you haven't met yet.

And, says Rosemary, at Round-A-Bout you can shop in the kind of atmosphere that doesn't exist at the collection agencies.

"One woman, who told me she was on welfare, came in and looked around and was delighted," Rosemary explains. The woman told her:

"I am poor and have to shop for second-hand clothes for my children. But now, for once, I don't get the things thrown at me.

"I can hold my head up and shop in here . . ."

The demand is high right now for used children's clothing but Rosemary Cardinal says don't waste your time bringing junk . . . it must be good quality or it won't sell.

Ombudsman System Does the Job: Maloney

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

The ombudsman system works, says the man who ran Ontario's program for three years.

Arthur Maloney said in an interview here Tuesday of the thousands of cases he handled only 28 had to be brought before the legislature.

All the others were satisfactorily resolved at the ministerial or departmental level.

"When B.C.'s ombudsman takes up duties later this spring, the public will have a corridor of access right up to the seat of power in government," he said.

Maloney, who has since returned to private law practice, said his experience as ombudsman led him to conclude the benefits to the public are two-fold apart from the help afforded individuals.

MALONEY
. . . 'access corridor'

First, the knowledge by civil servants that there is someone watching over them with access to their files raises the calibre of service they give the public.

And secondly, it gives the people a feeling of security knowing they have a watchdog with the powers to look into their grievances. It's the ordinary citizen's assurance of receiving fair and just treatment from the government, he said.

B.C. has hired Dr. Karl A. Friedmann, a political science professor from the University of Calgary, as its first ombudsman. But he can't take up his duties until the appointment has been sanctioned by the legislature which is not expected to sit until late March.

B.C. was the second to last province to appoint an ombudsman. Only Prince Edward Island is without one now.

Maloney was in Victoria talking to law students at the University of Victoria and giving an address as part of the Leon Ladner lecture series.

Any citizen who feels he has suffered an injustice at the hands of government or one of its agencies can write to the office of the ombudsman with the complaint.

The ombudsman checks out the complaint, and judges whether it warrants perusal.

The ombudsman does not have the power to implement changes, but its recommendary powers are not without teeth.

If the minister or director of the agency does not follow the ombudsman's suggestions, he can then bring the matter before the legislature.

It is a service for the little man, Maloney says. The majority of his cases came from private individuals although groups of citizens and even corporations took advantage of his services from time to time.

Maloney's cases ranged from fighting land appropriation by the Ontario government to the case of the man who believed he was the Prince of Wales and wanted Maloney to deal with Buckingham Palace to ensure his rightful place on the throne when the time came.

Maloney said his office was able to do a competent job with the $4.1 million budget and staff of 122 he wrangled from the Ontario legislature.

Ontario's general population of eight million and civil service of 92,000 are about triple B.C.'s.

Maloney said it would be reasonable to assume the provincial office would require a staff of 40 and budget of more than $1 million.

But when one considers the millions of dollars government spends investigating citizens (policing, taxing, liquor licencing, etc.) it's only fair a fraction of that amount is used in turn by the citizen to investigate government, he said.

$518,000 to UVic For Pollution Study

The federal government's National Science and Engineering Research Council has awarded a three-year $518,000 grant to the University of Victoria to study sea pollution.

It is one of the largest grants of its kind received by the university and is expected to be the first step toward creating an Environmental Toxicology Centre on the campus.

The three-year study will concentrate on the impact of man-made pollution on the marine environment and ways to measure and control it.

Scientists from the departments of biochemistry and microbiology, chemistry and biology will work as a team to study several aspects of aquatic and marine technology.

The over-all co-ordinators will be biochemist Dr. Alastair Matheson and inorganic chemist Dr. Alex McAuley.

The scientists went to Ottawa to explain the project, which has been in the planning stages for 18 months and conforms with the council's guidelines for strategic grants. These are given for projects considered of national importance.

Biologist Dr. Derek Ellis will co-ordinate one of three projects being undertaken by the university. Ellis has spent the past 10 years studying the effect of pollution on the marine environment in order to enable regulatory bodies, such as the provincial government's Pollution Control Branch, to inpose policing regulations.

The new grant will enable Ellis and his co-workers to study rehabilitating marine ecosystems with a long-range object of being able to advise on effective methods of pollution clean-up.

Inorganic chemist Dr. Tom Buckley will co-ordinate a program to assess the effect of various levels of copper and zinc on coho salmon and the effect of these metals on the susceptibility of salmonids toward infectious disease.

Organic chemist Dr. Paul West will co-ordinate a program to try and identify, characterize and synthesize trace contaminants, such as sugars in pulp wastes, and study their effects on fish and other marine organisms.

Q. Can you tell me the origin of the name God's Truce? R.D.

A. After the fall of Charlemangne's empire in the 9th and 10th century, western Europe was threatened by anarchy. The barons and nobles were continually fighting one another. The Church of Rome sought to restore peace by forbidding war between the barons on certain days and weeks. This became known as God's Truce. Those who broke the peace were punished by fines, banishment or excommunication.

City's Great Talkers Gagged on 75 Cents a Minute

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

Talk wasn't cheap at Hillside Mall the last few days.

An argument cost 75¢ a minute — a bargain as far as the University of Victoria Debate and Speech Society is concerned.

But society members discovered parcel-laden shoppers aren't loquacious or even generous when cornered in shopping malls.

The students have been in the mall soliciting arguments from passersby since Friday without much success.

In a fund-raising stunt that ended Tuesday, the society charged 75¢ a minute to debate any topic. The idea was to collect $1,000 toward a debating trip to England May 1.

Although the gimmick attracted smooth talkers like evangelist Brian Ruud, who commanded the soap box for an hour, most shoppers weren't in a buying mood.

The society only sold 30 debates for a total take of $190.

Society spokesman Tom Harding said the easiest people to talk into an argument were older shoppers who couldn't walk by the debating team fast enough to get away.

An even number of men and women bought debates, but middle-aged women tended to spend more money.

"Probably because they have children our age and are more sympathetic," Harding said.

Revival of the dying art of skillful debating is the aim of the society. Eight or 10 members, mainly first and second-year arts students, want to take a university tour of England and coax Britain's best debaters out here for annual competitons.

The encounter with Ruud was the most troublesome.

The expensively-bedecked evangelist picked religion as his topic, worked himself into a fervor and started trying to convert the crowd, according to Harding, who said Ruud did $45 worth of talking but didn't want to pay.

He eventually peeled about $23 from a roll of bills.

But Ruud today said he had no intention of supporting their cause — he only intended to help them by attracting an audience.

"I did it to help them out; stir up a little action for them and have a little fun."

Ruud said he paid a dollar in advance and the debating society agreed to turn off the stopwatch. Later when they insisted he owed more money, he paid them.

The debate provided a convenient public platform. A Socialist Party of Canada member used it to preach the evils of capitalism.

Victoria has a reputation for debating excellence, but eloquence was hard to find among the 100,000 persons who pass through the mall each day.

Some people even paid the student debaters to carry on both sides of the argument.

The real challengers paid to discuss a diversity of topics including the psychological damage of television and a theory that all actors are sexual deviates.

Other ideas explored by the team ranged from political issues to a few really bizarre concepts. One man wanted to discuss converting Canada to an orthodox Islamic republic to solve the country's economic problems. Another wanted to talk about cheating as the only way to compete in business.

One 12-year-old girl debated against the decriminalization of marijuana.

The shopping mall debate was good practice, but all in fun, Harding said.

"We didn't really try and win, we just tried to argue well."

The team won't let Victoria off the hook and plans another fund-raising debate soon using local celebrities and politicians as debaters.

High on the list of candidates is Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm.

Steve Silent Hero In Month of Cats

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Gary Lupul came up with a five-point performance, Saskatoon Blades lost more than a hockey game, Victoria Cougars put the lid on a great month with an 8-3 victory and, with 12 games remaining, are assured of at least a tie for a playoff berth in the Western League's Western Division. And so on.

There was no shortage of noteworthy items emerging from Tuesday's WHL matchup in Memorial Arena but somehow Steve Amiss elbowed his way into prominence.

It's not that Amiss, Victoria's netminder, stood the Blades on their ears. The Cougars, after all, did outshoot Saskatoon 43-32 and Victoria's attack supplied a handsome working margin.

Still, the red-headed netminder stood out as the silent hero. That was his contribution Tuesday as well as during most of February, a month in which the Cougars compiled a 9-1-2, won-lost-tied record.

His support, especially during the first half of the game, was solid. He came up with several saves that, while not overly-obvious, were important ones.

And that's the way it's been for the past month. Not always endowed with exceptional defensive support, Amiss has responded very well since Cougar coach Jack Shupe designated him as the full-time custodian rather than alternating with Kevin Eastman. In 10 games since being declared the regular starter, Amiss has allowed only 2.78 goals per contest.

Over-all, Amiss has dropped his goals-against figure from just over 4.00 to 3.67, and has made it difficult for sophomore Eastman to earn a start.

His consistent contributions have pushed the Cougars into second place, three points ahead of New Westminster Bruins, and have helped the team's drive for a playoff berth. Tuesday's two points means Cougars need only one more point to be assured of a spot in the post-season action.

Lupul was the big man on offense with three goals, running his total to 45, and two assists. The five points were recorded although both Shupe and Lupul agreed the peppery centre did not have a particularly good night.

Linemates Bob Smith and Brad Palmer, with two, also scored while Greg Adams and Barry Pederson counted the other Victoria goals.

Terry Paskaruk, Bob Black and Marc Chartier connected for the Blades, who suffered a big loss when Brent Ashton was injured in the first period. A 62-goal scorer for the Blades, Ashton took a shot on a foot and suffered a broken toe that will sideline him for about six weeks.

It was a tough blow for the Blades, who already are missing Ken Federko and Dan Bent. In addition, forward Pat Conacher is playing regularly on a broken ankle.

QUICK SHOTS: Cougars, who have yet to lose to Seattle, get a chance to eliminate the Breakers from playoff contention when they meet in the Washington city tonight . . . rookie Robert Jacobson and Scott Lang were the most consistent of a Victoria defence that continues to play spottily . . . Palmer got his chance to score twice when league headquarters reversed a sitout order . . . The rookie forward drew a one-game suspension for a head-butting duel with New Westminster's Neil Meadmore . . . Both players will sit out their suspension Saturday when the teams meet at Memorial Arena.

Despite the good production from the Lupul-Palmer-Smith combination, the line of Barry Pederson, Mike Shields and Adams was Victoria's standout . . . Lupul's first goal provided him with his 275th scoring point in the WHL . . . In other action Tuesday, Brandon Wheat Kings clipped Billings 6-3 before a crowd of 3,969 in Brandon and the improving Regina Pats surprised the Wranglers 8-5 in Calgary.

Bob's Decision to Leave Leaves Hole at No. 4

Oh well, so much for the eclipse! The otherwise big surprise of a surprising week (after Nirmal Dillon, that is) is the fact that Bob Burrows has decided to cast his lot with Edmonton insofar as his athletic future is concerned.

There should be no complaints locally. Not really. Burrows had been laid off from his job, has a wife and family to care for, and was open to offers, so why not listen? He still has a saleable product — that enormous talent that has made him one of the most feared hitters in fastball and also a better-than average basketball player.

Perhaps he was taken too much for granted. That is so often the case with athletes, and he leaves with what should be a deep sense of regret from his associates.

For many years he has been the big stick for Budgets (nee Bates) and certainly he helped put them on the international map and keep them there. Over the years with DataTech (nee Scorpions) he has been a standout as a relatively small man in now what is the big man's world of basketball.

He is a past winner of the athlete-of-the year award and his name has always ranked near the top of the list whenever selection time rolls around, just as it does when they get around to picking out the MVP in each and every Canadian softball championship for the past five years.

It's unfortunate a permanent position couldn't have been found for him here. But that's also the life of an athlete. Time soon runs out and Burrows wants to be assured of a more permanent type of commitment than he had here before it's too late. And it would be no surprise if he turns out to be a fine first baseman in the future, as he has been a first-rate catcher in the past. The legs may last longer that way.

Still, he could be back. He appeared to leave the door slightly open on TV the other night when he said, yes, he would rather play in his home town, and no, he hadn't ruled Victoria completely out of his future. And there that matter rests with Budgets having a big hole to fill in that No. 4 position in the batting order.

Also on the amazing side were those two TV clips: (1) The Steve Durbano hockey stick-swinging incident at Madison Square Garden and (2) that spectacular bumping duel between stock car drivers Donnie Allison and Cale Yarborough at 100 mph plus. Why Durbano — especially considering his past record — didn't get the rest of the year, will have to be one of the mysteries of the season. And that driving exhibition by Allison and Yarborough, while marvelled at in the pits and probably called "what a hell of a race," should have seen each of them suspended indefinitely, or heavily fined, or both. As it is, both got tapped lightly on the wrist and told "don't do it again". Trouble is, next time somebody might get hurt and that somebody, in an already dangerous sport, may not be either one of them.

In lacrosse it's no surprise that Ron MacNeil of the Shamrocks has turned down the invitation to coach Nanaimo Timbermen of the Western Lacrosse Association. And yes, he'll play for the Shamrocks again. But here's the teaser. That will be only if the directors apologize to ex-coach Dillon for the manner in which he was treated in what many believe was a forced resignation. Incidentally, new coach Bill Munroe has had preliminary discussions with two of the Shamrock big guns, MacNeil and Ivan Thompson and, according to general manager Leon Hall there has been no indication that either plans to retire. And that comes under the heading of good news.

For the horsey set, there is the report from Cloverdale that harness racing driver Keith Linton is not only Canada's percentage driving champion for 1978 but, according to figures compiled by the U.S. Trotting Association, Linton finished the season with the third highest winning percentage in North America, .424, may not be real shocker, but it is noteworthy.

Linton's record consisted of 253 victories, 152 seconds and 139 thirds in 907 starts last year. Linton also finished third in Canada in dashes won in 1978. Incidentally, five other Cloverdale drivers finished among Canada's top 50. Joe Hudon was 15th, Dave Jungquist 30th, Stem Ericcson 38th, Jim Mohorich 46th and Clarence Gagnon 47th. All finished with winning percentage records of .300 or better, all raced at Sandown last summer and all most likely will be back here in about eight weeks time.

And there they are!

All Teams High Calibre In Island Hoop Tourney

The eight best high school boys' basketball teams on Vancouver Island square off in Nanaimo starting Thursday afternoon to see who is No. 1, but don't ask tournament chairman Jerry Montgomery for any predictions.

"This could be the closest tournament we've had in years," said Montgomery. "There's no super-power this year like Oak Bay Bays used to be, or Nanaimo Islanders were last year, but there's a consistantly high calibre among all eight schools."

Montgomery, from Nanaimo's John Barsby school, is in charge of the double-knockout tournament involving Parkland Panthers, Mt. Douglas Rams, Oak Bay and Belmont Braves from the South Island and Nanaimo, Courtenay Towhees, Cowichan Thunderbirds and Campbell River Tyees from the North Island.

At stake besides first place among "AA" schools (grade 11 and 12 enrolment over 200) on the Island are three berths in the B.C. finals slated for Vancouver's PNE Agrodome and Coliseum, March 14-17.

Also at stake are selection to the Victoria Times first and second Island all-star teams and the Times award to the most outstanding player in the three-day Island tournament winding up with the championship final Saturday night.

Parkland, ranked 10th in B.C., and Nanaimo, rated ninth in the province, carry unbeaten league and playoff records into the tournament.

The Rams, Bays and Braves followed in that order in last weekend's South Island playoffs at UVic while Courtenay, Cowichan and Cambell River were the second, third and fourth teams in the North Island playdowns.

Thursday's opening draw pits Cowichan against Mt. Doug at 3:45 p.m., Courtenay against Oak Bay at 5:30, Campbell River against Parkland at 7:15 and Nanaimo against Belmont at 9.

Friday's schedule begins with a pair of losers' bracket contests at 3:45 and 5:30 p.m. while the winners meet at 7:15 and 9.

The tournament ends Saturday with games at 10 and 11:15 a.m. to sort out the fifth- through eighth-place finishers, followed by the contest to determine third place at 7:15 and the final for first and second place at 9.

Trophy presentations to winning teams, all-stars and the outstanding player will be made following the final game.

The all-stars and MVP will be chosen by a three-man committee headed by Jack Gilbert, former basketball coach at Alberni District senior secondary.

There are several outstanding South Island candidates for MVP consideration, including Quinn Groenhyde and Greg Wiltjer of Parkland, Wayne Andrews of Oak Bay, Tom Raine of Belmont and Russ Thornton, Russ Mosher and Jay Loukes of Mt. Doug.

Blues Prove a Point

By The Canadian Press

St. Louis Blues goalie Ed Staniowski had the look of revenge in his eye as he brushed back 29 New York Rangers' shots — and admitted as much after the Blues won 4-1.

"I think we realized we had something to prove to (the Rangers) and our fans," Staniowski said after he stopped 29 of 30 Rangers' shots Tuesday night. "We had (to prove) that we can play on even terms with the better teams."

The revenge was stirred by last week's Ranger victory over the Blues — a game marred by a major fight that resulted in a suspension for the Blues' Steve Durbano.

"Yes," agreed Blues' coach Barclay Plager, "this was a bit of sweet revenge."

The usually porous Blues' defence tightened to withold numerous New York onslaughts, as the Rangers fell to a Smythe Division team for only the third time in 15 games. It also ended a six-game Ranger win streak.

For the Blues, Smythe Division cellar-dwellers most of the season, it was the end of a seven-game winless skid and revenge for their 7-3 loss in New York last Wednesday.

"We owed them a little bit after that game in New York," Staniowski said. "Tonight was the soundest I've seen this team play this season."

In other games, New York Islanders trounced Montreal Canadiens 7-3 and Colorado Rockies upset Boston Bruins 4-2.

The Blues jumped to a 3-0 lead in the first period on goals by Curt Bennett, Tony Currie and Bernie Federko.

Bennett started the scoring by deflecting a shot by Barry Gibbs and, after Currie raced around Ranger defenceman Dave Farrish for the second score, Federko completed a two-on-one breakaway by converting a goalmouth pass from Larry Giroux.

The Blues's Bob Murdoch made it 4-0 two minutes into the second period. Taking another goalmouth setup by Giroux, Murdoch took advantage of a three-on-one opportunity.

In the final minute of the second period, Murdoch's younger brother, Don, broke Staniowski's shutout bid.

Clark Gillies scored three goals and his line-mates contributed seven assists, including four by Mike Bossy as the Islanders beat Montreal for just the second time in 14 games. Montreal's Guy Lafleur earned his 55th assist to make the star right winger the league's first 100-point scorer this year. The loss was only Montreal's second loss in the last 19 games. Islanders' goalie Billy Smith put on a spectacular display in a 10-second span midway through the second period when he stopped rapid-fire blasts by Lafleur, Larry Robinson, Lafleur again and Serge Savard.

Redmen Gain National Final

LENNOXVILLE, Que. (CP) — McGill Redmen scored an 81-69 triumph Tuesday night for a 2-0 victory over Bishop's Gaiters in the best-of-three Quebec University Athletic Association basketball final.

The victory means the Redmen will represent the QUAA in the national final in Calgary next week.

Ferrari Support

MODENA, Italy (Reuter) — Enzo Ferrari, Italy's best known racing car maker, has thrown his weight behind the Formula One Constructors' Association (FOCA) in its fight with motor racing's governors.

"The Ferrari team belongs to FOCA and will go along with all decisions it makes," he said.

Ferrari was replying to remarks made by Fabrizio Serena, president of Italy's Motor Sport Federation, in which he criticized FOCA, singling out Ferrari specifically for some of the blame.

FOCA, displeased with recent decisions taken by the International Sporting Commission, the Paris-based organization which controls motor sport, has recently demanded autonomy to arrange Formula One races directly with organizers.

Shoulder Surgery

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League said today that defenceman Doug Wilson underwent surgery for a dislocated shoulder and will be out of action indefinitely.

Wilson was injured when he crashed into the boards Sunday in a contest against Pittsburgh Penguins.

Lindsay Blots Memory Of 'Black Tuesday'

MONTREAL (CP) — It was Tuesday at the Canadian women's curling championship, and British Columbia skip Lindsay Sparkes of North Vancouver had memories — bad ones — of the same setting in 1976.

The B.C. rink dropped two games in that event three years ago in Winnipeg, both on what Sparkes recalled as "Black Tuesday," before going on to finish the round robin 8-2 and win a playoff for the Lassie title.

Things went better this time as Sparkes earned three victories on the day to move her record to 6-0 after seven rounds at the Town of Mount Royal Arena.

The sixth consecutive triumph came by a 6-4 count over young Barbara Despins of Saskatoon and her Saskatchewan rink.

"Tonight I was sort of feeling like the old veteran," Sparkes said. "It wasn't so long ago that I was one of the younger ones that was coming up.

"They're a very strong team. I think that in a close game like that, or when you're playing against tough competition, we know each other so well that we know what each other needs. I think it really does help in the long run."

Quebec's Lorraine Bowes of Baie d'Urfe was alone in second place at 6-1 after a 10-7 seventh-round victory over Bathurst's Anne Orser of New Brunswick.

Newfoundland's Sue Ann Bartlett of Labrador City, who fell 9-6 to Chris Pidzarko's Stony Mountain rink from Manitoba, was tied for third place at 5-2 with Nova Scotia.

Penny LaRocque of Halifax beat the Territories' Margaret Whitlock of Hay River, N.W.T., 12-6, while the other game saw Alberta's Myrna McQuarrie of Lethbridge, the 1977 winner, defeat Prince Edward Island's Elayne Thomson of Crapaud 9-6.

In the sixth round earlier, B.C. beat Nova Sctia 9-4, Quebec dumped Saskatchewan 13-5, Newfoundland downed New Brunswick 11-4, Alberta beat the Territories 11-5 and Ontario defeated P.E.I. 9-4.

The fifth round had B.C. beating Alberta 11-9, Quebec dropping an 8-6 decision to Nova Scotia, Saskatchewan topping Newfoundland 9-7, Manitoba downing New Brunswick 8-5 and Ontario trouncing the Territories 10-3.

Speedway Committed: Mortel

"The directors of Western Speedway feel that they have committed themselves to a very sizeable investment to ensure the continuation of auto racing in Victoria, and by doing so have individually made themselves responsible for this debt."

Tony Mortel, track manager of Western Speedway, issued a press release Tuesday outlining Western's position in a contract dispute with the Vanco)ver Island Track Racing Association, which represents local stock car and super-stock drivers.

Mortel states in the release that Western lost a total of $9,177 on the 15 local VITRA races last season and has secured a new mortgage to build new grandstands and improve other facilities at the track for this season, which will cost between $250,000 and $300,000.

The question of backgate receipts forms the crux of the dispute.

The drivers' group wants to retain control of the backgate funds, which are used to pay for insurance, a crash fund, a points fund and guaranteeing the purses.

"Western Speedway has greed to pay VITRA $750 plus all officials, insurance, rpize money and all other costs in the presentation of a VITRA racing program but has only asked for the revenues of the back gate until the VITRA shows are self-supporting," states Mortel.

"At that time any money difference would be reimbursed to VITRA."

Meanwhile, Mortel is going ahead with plans to stage 35 events during the coming season and leaves the door open for local stock and super-stock cars to compete "even although the club has not signed a contract with Western Speedway."

Federal Fisheries Report Backs Sports License

Sol Sinclair's report on A Licencing and Fee System for the Coastal Fisheries of British Columbia, commissioned by Fisheries and Environment Canada, may have major ramifications for everyone involved in sports fishing.

Sinclair wrote the report after talking to commercial fishermen, processors, native groups, representatives of five recreational fishing organizations and sportsmen at the annual B.C. Wildlife Federation convention.

Although most of the report concerns changes in the commercial license scheme for both native and non-native fishermen, part of the study supports a stand Sinclair took in an earlier report — to license sports fishermen.

Sinclair reasons the increased leisure time we now enjoy, coupled with the population growth in British Columbia, will lead to an increased demand for sports fishing.

"Accordingly, as the trend continues for an increasing reliance by more people on sports fishing as a leisure time activity the pressure will increase for exclusive fishing areas for sports fishing. Under such a situation conflicts between commercial and sports fishermen in some areas can arise. To minimize such conflicts and to ensure orderly operation and management of the entire fishery over time and space, it is desireable that sports fishing be licensed."

Further along, Sinclair states:

"Undoubtedly as more salmon appear as a result of the Salmonid Enhancement Program and with continuing population growth along the coast of British Columbia increased pressure will develop for freer access to and a larger share of the available fish stocks.

"Over time the number of commercial fishermen can be expected to decline — this is the history of all developed primary industries — but sports fishermen will increase in number.

"As sportsmen these fishermen are very interested, and many are personally involved, in conservation and sound management of the basic resource."

Objectives of the scheme are as follows:

- "To provide a record of the number and distribution of anglers.
- "To provide a useable record of quantities of fish caught by species, necessary fop conservation and management of the fisheries.
- "To give sportsfishermen an increased sense of involvement and voice in the management of the fisheries for recreational purposes.
- "To provide funds necessary to fincance the special needs of sportsfishing through provision of adequate supervision, sportsfishing area management, data collection and processing, and for over-all management purposes."

Based on this rationale, Sinclair recommends:

- "Every sportsfisherman shall hold a personal fishing license to participate in sportsfishing. A basic fee of $10 per year should entitle a fisherman to fish for every species during seasons declared open for such fishing by the Department of Fisheries. A lesser fee ranging from $1 to $3 may be issued for periods of shorter duration. Exemption from fees should be granted to minors and senior citizens.
- "Daily and seasonal catch limits should be established by species on the basis of biological considerations.
- "For the purpose of statistical information and management purposes a tag system should be utilized for species which are scarce or which are being managed under a special program.
- "Non-Canadians should be subject to a higher personal license fee and some limitations on total annual catch.
- "Charter boats are commercial fishing enterprises and should be subject to commercial vessel license fees. Fish derbies are regarded by many as being of the same nature and could be subject to a license fee and catch royalty.
- "Sound fisheries management requires closed areas and closed seasons for biological reasons. This has always been practiced in the commercial fishery. With the intensified sportsfishing activities on the waters adjoining the heavily populated sections of the province, or large tourist centres such closures should be considered for the sports fisheries as well."

Comments on the licensing proposal should be sent to: Shirley T. Popham, Information Branch, Fisheries and Oceans, 1090 W. Pender St., Vancouver, B.C., V6E 2P1.

Jets Name McVie As Hillman Fired

By The Canadian Press

Winnipeg Jets of the World Hockey Association dropped their eighth game in their last 11 starts Tuesday night.

Then they dropped head coach Larry Hillman.

Hillman's firing was announced a few minutes after the Jets' 5-2 loss to Birmingham Bulls. The Jets have hired Tom McVie, former head coach of the Washington Capitals.

"I can't put the blame on anybody," said Hillman, who played for the Jets as a defenceman until 1977, when he moved up into the coaching ranks.

"I felt I always gave my best shot," said the low-key style coach. "But the writing was on the wall and you have to look after the fans who support you."

The Jets' inept performance against the cellar-dwelling Bulls angered the 7,761 fans, the second-smallest crowd to date this season in Winnipeg.

McVie, 44, is known as a tough disciplinarian and the Jets, who are in third place in the WHA standings, hope he can snap the team out of their slump.

McVie, a long-time friend of Winnipeg Jets' general manager John Ferguson, was actually hired on Monday, after the Jets bought out the remaining 1½ years of his contract with the National Hockey League Capitals.

"Maybe this is a good omen," said Hillman. "The team still has a chance to finish high."

In another game Tuesday, the league-leading Edmonton Oilers ran their undefeated streak to 11 games, playing New England Whalers to a 1-1 overtime tie.

Steve Carlson of the Oilers scored the tying goal at 7:24 of the third period. The Whalers' goal came early in the second period on a 35-foot slap shot by rookie winger Jordy Douglas.

Wayne Gretzky of the Oilers came close to winning the game when he hit the New England goal post with eight seconds left to play in regulation time.

The teams played a scoreless overtime period, during which New England goalie Al Smith faced five shots—one of them an arm save on a 20-foot shot by Ron Chipperfield.

"I thought Gretzky had me beat in the last few seconds of the third period," said Smith. "I was lucky. In overtime, I was just fortunate that Chipperfield shot the puck instead of trying to deke me."

Edmonton coach Glen Slather said, "It's nice to have a point from a tie but it feels like a little bit of a letdown when you've won 10 in a row.

"Still, we had them on the ropes. We weren't playing for the draw, just to keep our unbeaten string alive."

BIRMINGHAM (5) — Bob Stephenson (12th and 13th), Jim Turkiewicz (3rd), Steve Alley (11th), Michael Goulet (20th). WINNIPEG (2) — Peter Sullivan (36th), Kent Nilsson 28th). Attendance — 7,167.

NEW ENGLAND (1) — Jordy Douglas (3); EDMONTON (1) — Steve Carlson (11th). Attendance — 14,387.

Hope's Tally Boosts Gulls

Ron Hope drilled in the winning goal at 10:50 of the overtime period Tuesday to give Juan de Fuca Gulls a 5-4 victory over league-champion Saanich Braves at Pearkes Arena in the opening game of the best-of-seven Patterson Division playoff in the South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League.

Ross Anderson won a faceoff and passed to Hope, who made no mistake in drilling home the shot.

Matt Selva led Juan de Fuca's over-all scoring effort with two goals while other single tallies were added by Dave McLachlan and Guy Moran.

Gulls led 3-2 after the first period and 4-2 at one point in the second frame.

Wayne Himmelman (2), Bill Adkin and Phil Varcoe replied for Braves, who came from behind to force the overtime when Varcoe connected at 15:45 of the third period.

Peter Adamek played a strong role in the Juan de Fuca victory, blocking 45 shots on goal. Steve Hanna of Saanich made 31 saves.

The second game of the series is scheduled for Monday at Juan de Fuca Arena.

TWO TEAMS TO JOIN BCJHL NEXT YEAR

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Two teams from the Pacific Junior Hockey League have been accepted to join the British Columbia Junior Hockey League next season, increasing the BCJHL to 14 teams and reducing the PJHL to three.

BCJHL president Ernie McLean said Tuesday the NorWes Caps of North Vancouver and the Richmond Sockeyes will play in the league's Coast division. The new additions will mean eight clubs in the Coast division and six in the Interior division.

Both leagues are Tier Two Junior A, but the PJHL teams are all located in the Greater Vancouver area while the BCJHL has clubs across the southern half of the province. The Coast division leaders now are the Bellingham Blazers, the only U.S. entry in the league.

McLean said the move will consolidate Tier Two Junior A hockey in the province.

No decisions have been made on the future of the PJHL. The league could fold, continue with three teams or attract new entries.

Wimbledon Hikes Cash

LONDON (Reuter) — Prize money for this year's Wimbledon lawn tennis championships has been increased by five per cent, the organizers have announced.

The extra cash, which takes the total prize money to $554,000, has been spread evenly throughout the championship events.

The men's champion will get $40,000, an increase of $2,000 over last year and ten times the figure the champion received when Wimbledon went open in 1968.

The winner of the women's singles title will receive an extra $1,800, making the title worth $36,000.

The men's doubles' winners will receive $16,000 and the women's doubles' champions $13,860.

Announcing the increases, Sir Brian Burnett, chairman of the All England Club, said Wimbledon officials met organizers of the other major championships — Australia, France and the United States — and came to an agreement not to increase prize money at these events by more than five to 10 per cent.

Sir Brian also said the tie break rule at Wimbledon would operate at 6-6 this year instead of at 8-8 as in the past. "All matches are taking much longer than they used to," he said.

Blazers Maintain Hex over '76ers

By The Canadian Press

To borrow a line from W. C. Fields, the '76ers would have rather been in Philadelphia.

The '76ers — in the midst of their longest road trip of the season — haven't won a National Basketball Association game here since February, 1976, and Tuesday night was no exception.

Portland, with the NBA's best home-court record, blew a 17-point third-quarter lead but held on for a 118-115 victory as Lionel Hollins hit two free throws with six seconds left to clinch the win.

When it was over, Philadelphia coach Billy Cunningham blamed himself for losing his cool, saying his lack of emotional control carried over to his players.

Philadelphia was whistled for four technical fouls — two on guard Eric Money, who was ejected with 8:40 left in the game, one on Darryl Dawkins and one on Cunningham.

"If the coach is going to be that way, you can't expect anything else from the players," Cunningham said.

The Blazers hit all four free throws on the technicals, and — considering Portland's three-point margin of victory — they loomed very large indeed.

Elsewhere Tuesday, Los Angeles Lakers downed Kansas City Kings 122-114, Atlanta Hawks dumped Houston Rockets 125-111, San Diego Clippers whipped Indiana Pacers 124-107, New York Knicks edged Golden State Warriors 101-99, Chicago Bulls defeated Detroit Pistons 124-117 and Denver Nuggets blasted Seattle SuperSonics 121-106.

David Thompson and George McGinnis combined for 53 points as Denver successfully closed out a six-game homestand by handing Seattle its ninth setback in the last 12 games. Thompson, who has averaged 28.2 points over his last eight games, had 28 points and McGinnis added 25.

Rain Wrecks Cricket Hopes

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (Reuter) — Rain ended Pakistan's hopes of victory in the third and final cricket test against New Zealand Wednesday, but won the series 1-0 following success in the first test at Christchurch.

New Zealand started the day on 231 for five, just 126 ahead. But two heavy downpours, including one which cut out the whole afternoon session, prevented Pakistan from pressing home its advantage.

New Zealand was able to declare its second innings at 281 for eight after tea and the Pakistanis simply had to bat out the remaining minutes.

Six Clubs Post Perfect Marks

Six teams in the Victoria and District Amateur Basketball Association completed regular-season competition with perfect records.

First United Jets, in the midget girls' league, and Willows Warriors, in the pre-midget boys' division, each went through a 15-game schedule with an unbroken string of victories.

Oak Bay (bantam girls) and First United '79ers (pre-midget girls) were unbeaten in 12 games, Williams Automotive (senior 'B' women) took eight straight games and First United Stars (juvenile girls) won all their four league contests.

A New Look In Women's

Women are usually remembered best for their appearance and the Victoria Women's Softball League isn't about to let the side down in that respect this spring.

There will be a brand new look to the league this year — a new directorate, a couple of new clubs, new sponsors, some new coaches and an improvement in facilities at Hyacinth Park which should make things more comfortable for the fans.

And, to add a little spice to the proceedings, there's a breakaway bunch, known by what else — The Breakers — who want to make their presence felt.

It all adds up to eight teams, as compared to nine last year, with a new junior club from Langford replacing the Strawberry Vale junior team of 1978.

The senior clubs are:

The league champion Stockers (nee Skylarks), coached by former Doc's Blues pitching star, Joan Firkins, and managed by Don Eden;

CJVI Vikettes, runners-up to the league title and the B.C. title, coached by Dan Campbell and managed by veteran Walter Yeamans;

Bemister's Welding, formerly McDonald's Furniture, coached by Carl Bolton and managed by George Stewart;

Butler Bros, with Eric Olsen as coach and Curtis Olsen as manager;

The Combos, with Carol Newcombe as coach and Smokey Green as manager;

The Breakers, many of whom were with Combos last season, with Warren Holley as coach and Sue Beischer as manager;

Hygrade Radio, with Brian Perry as coach and Gary Mason as manager;

And the Strathcona Juniors (from Langford) with Andre de Hogg cast in the dual role of manager-coach.

Ingraham Hotel from last year is out.

Bolton is the new president, Mavis Stokke, vice-president; Margaret Barber, secretary, and Firkins, treasurer.

The clubs will play a 28-game regular schedule plus tournaments with the season expected to start on or about April 28.

Stockers will also be playing in the Vancouver Senior League and will meet Doc's Blues in their first inter-city clash on the weekend of April 28.

Daffodil Sprouts An Honor Roll

It's the 26th annual Daffodil women's bonspiel at Victoria Curling Club, beginning Thursday, and the committee is bringing out the honor roll for the occasion.

The opening ceremonies, set for 7:15 p.m., between the first and second draw, will feature Flora Martin, Dotty McDonald, Sherri Bath and Pam Taylor.

Martin, who this year captured her third provincial senior women's title and recently was named to Canada's Curling Hall of Fame, will deliver the first stone;

MacDonald, who has participated in the bonspiel for the past 15 years, will hold the broom;

Bath, who skipped an Oak Bay rink to runner-up honors in the provincial girls' championship this year, and Taylor, who guided the University of Victoria team to the Western Canada University championship this season, will act as sweepers.

Opening draw times are Thursday at 5, 8:15 and 10:30 p.m., and Friday at 8 a.m. There will be four events.

Gong show will be held Friday at 7:15 p.m. with breakfast between 8 and 11 a.m. Saturday and a dance in the lounge from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Finals will be held Sunday at 3 p.m.

Restful Day For O'Malley

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Walter O'Malley, chairman of the board of Los Angeles Dodgers, spent a restful Tuesday in the Mayo Clinic at Rochester, Minn., where he was flown Monday after complaining of dizziness.

The 75-year-old O'Malley had been at Dodgertown, the spring home of his National League baseball club at Vero Beach when he was stricken.

Vikes Must Win, But Dinos Are In

Calgary Dinosaurs will make the Canadian college men's basketball finals regardless of what they do in this weekend's Canada West University Athletic Association playoff at McKinnon gym, but not so UVic Vikings.

Vikings, first-place finishers in the Canada West schedule with a 17-3 record, must win the best-of-three series against the second-place Dinos (13-7) to be sure of a berth in the Canadian Interuniversity Athletic Association tournament March 8-10 in Calgary.

The Dinosaurs make the national final as the host school.

If Vikings lose they could still get to the nationals as the wild-card team, duplicating UVic Vikettes who drew the wild-card nomination in the Canadian university women's final this weekend in Regina.

Viking coach Ken Shields would rather nail down a berth with a victory in the best-of-three series. First game is at 8 p.m. Friday with the second at 8 p.m. Saturday. If a third is needed, it will be played Sunday at 2 p.m.

Vikings and Calgary split four league games this season, UVic winning the first two at home 84-67 and 85-47. But the Dinos, showing considerable improvement, embarrassed the Vikings 83-81 and 88-78 in a pair of late-season contests in Calgary. The butter-fingered Vikings committed nearly 50 turnovers in the Calgary series.

Shields is counting on those two losses to put his players in the proper frame of mind this weekend.

"They (Dinosaurs) have really hit their stride in the last three games, obviously gearing for the nationals," Shields said, "but I think our fellows will be ready for them."

Eight teams go on to the CIAU nationals in Calgary — the Canada West, Great Plains, Ontario West, Ontario East, Quebec and Atlantic conference champions, the host Dinosaurs and the wild card team slected by a CIAU panel.

Shields figures if worst comes to worst, Vikings have an excellent chance to get the wild card nomination because they've been ranked third nationally almost all season.

Spectacular Bid Insured for $10M

HALLANDALE, Fla. (AP) — Spectacular Bid, being touted as a potential Triple Crown winner, has been insured for $10 million.

Bud Delp, trainer of last year's two-year-old champion, said its owners increased the insurance to 10 million from $7 million shortly before Spectacular Bid won the Hutcheson Stakes at Gulfstream Park on Feb. 7.

Spectacular Bid, favored in the $200,000 Florida Derby on March 6, is owned by the Hawksworth Farm of Harry, Teresa and Tom Meyerhoff in Maryland.

Spectacular Bid has won $438,130 but Delp said that's not enough to pay the insurance premiums. He didn't say how much the premiums cost.

"In my opinion," Delp said, "the new policy covers half of Spectacular Bid's value. He's worth $20 million and I'd say there are people who would be part of a $20 million syndication.

"And he might be worth more than that after he wins the Triple Crown. Even if he never were to race again, he could be syndicated for between $10 million and $12 million. Because he is a great race horse, he has the potential of being a great sire."

Palmateer Suffering Dizziness, Double Vision

TORONTO (CP) — Goaltender Mike Palmateer will be lost to Toronto Maple Leafs for at least two games on advice of a neurologist.

A series of blows to the head in two games had left Palmateer with dizziness and double vision. He received a cut on the head when he stopped a shot during a weekend game. Then during the first period of a game Monday against Buffalo, he was involved in a collision with Sabres' Dave Schultz and also caught an errant stick in the mask which forced him to leave the game.

Rothmans Sponsorship Backs Equestrian Drive

TORONTO (CP) — While an infusion of $250,000 into the equestrian Grand Prix circuit is geared primarily toward preparations for the 1980 Olympics, the main excitement for the Canadian equestrian jumping program this year centres on two spring trails that will decide the makeup of the team for this year's Pan-American Games in Puerto Rico.

The $250,000 sponsorship by Rothmans of Pall Mall Canada to underwrite this year's 14-stop Grand Prix circuit was announced Tuesday at a news conference.

The two Grand Prix events to determine the Pan-Am Games will be held in Ontario in early June, but the dates and sites have yet to be determined.

In sharp contrast to 1975 and 1976, when the future looked bleak for the Canadian Equestrian Team, the jumping team now is judged by Sport Canada as one of the three most likely sports in which Canada could be in the medals at Moscow.

The renewed interest arises from Canadian showings in Europe last year and on the North American circuit in the fall. At the 1978 world championships, Canada placed three riders in the top 14, a team effort surpassed only by Britain, and finished fourth over all.

Following impressive victories at Washington and New York, the Canadian jumping team won its own event — the Royal Winter Fair — for the first time in a decade.

And the depth from which to draw the talent is a bonus for Tom Gayford, former Olympic gold medallist who now coaches the Canadian jumping team.

Vying for the four spots on the Pan-Am squad are the four members of last year's Royal team — Ian Millar of Perth, Ont.; Torchy Millar of Milton, Ont.; Terry Leibel of Toronto and John Simpson of Calgary.

The four team members were granted automatic selection to the Pan-Am trials but face strong challenges on the Games short list from veteran Jim Elder of Aurora, Ont.; 1976 Olympic silver medallist Michel Vaillancourt of Montreal; Bo Mearns of Victoria and the 1978 Rothman's champion, Mark Laskin of Edmonton.

The Grand Prix circuit starts in Regina on March 24 to open the Western Canada series. Other Western dates are March 30, at Brandon, Man.; April 14, at Calgary; Sept. 15, at Calgary, and Sept. 28, at Vancouver.

The Eastern select series gets under way at Aurora on June 9 and will be followed by Montreal, June 30; Quebec, July 15; Sutton, Ont., Aug. 12, and Toronto, Aug. 25.

JOB IN PORTLAND LURES BRITISH REF

LONDON (AP) — Tom Reynolds, one of Britain's top international soccer referees, quit English soccer Wednesday for a new job in North America.

Reynolds, 44, is leaving for Portland, Ore., where he plans to become the North American Soccer League's first referee-coach.

Reynolds is the first British referee to go to the U.S. while still active as an English League official.

He still had three years as a league referee before reaching the compulsory retirement age of 47 and was a leading candidate to handle this season's English FA Cup final.

Lovers, Co-Workers That's Sally, Burt

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

HOLLYWOOD — Sally Field, asked about her relationship with Burt Reynolds the other night by Johnny Carson, candidly announced she and the No. 1 box-office star are lovers.

They also are something of an acting team.

Reynolds has played a key role in establishing Sally as a bonafide movie star, one of the few actresses to rise from the morass of television sitcoms to first-rate screen roles.

Half of Sally's six movies were made with Burt, one of which was Smokey and the Bandit, second in all-time box-office receipts only to Star Wars. The others, Hooper and The End were winners, too.

However, Reynolds clearly is no Pgymalion, nor Sally a Galatea. If anything, Sally perhaps is more polished a performer than Burt. But he is almost solely responsible for Sally's new screen career.

"Burt and I had never met when he called to ask if I'd play the girl in Smokey," Sally said. "He remembered my three television series and liked my comedy sense. He needed quick comedy scenes like I did in TV.

"I was really surprised to hear from him because at that time I'd just done one movie, Stay Hungry which was seen by about four people.

"When we finished Smokey, Burt told me, 'You're going to be up at the top.' And I said, 'I'll believe that when I see it.'"

Sally is becoming a believer. She won an Emmy for her stunning performance in Sybil, a 1977 TV movie, and was outstanding in Heroes with Henry Winkler.

Now she has critics raving about her best performance to date in Morma Rae, in which she plays a downtrodden working class woman with a seedy reputation trying to raise a couple of kids.

Whenever possible, Sally and Burt work together at his new Jupiter Theater, built to his own specifications.

Fire Guts Store

REGINA (UPC) — A Woolworth's department store was completely gutted by fire Tuesday night in a blaze that struck in the heart of downtown Regina.

The two-storey structure occupied half a block of frontage of 11th Avenue, Regina's central thoroughfare and one of the city's main business streets.

No injuries were reported in the spectacular blaze, which struck in the early evening after shopping hours.

Firemen took over two hours to bring the fire under control, and traffic was completely blocked off on 11th Ave. for most of the evening.

No estimate of the damage was available late Tuesday night. Fire officials said they had not yet determined where or when the blaze started.

Doors were opened in the adjacent main branch of the Royal Bank to eliminate heavy smoke, but it was believed the bank suffered only smoke damage.

Firemen Seek Out at Age 60

OTTAWA (CP) — Ontario firefighters asked Senators Tuesday to ensure they are exempted from any future legislation that would prevent them from retiring at age 60.

Citing potential danger to firefighters and the public, the Ontario Professional Fire Fighters Association made the request in a submission to the special senate committee on retirement age policies.

Rights Probe 'Muzzled'

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition MPs Tuesday demanded the government stop an attempt in court to exempt immigration department activities from the anti-discrimination powers of the Canadian Human Rights Commission.

Progressive Conservative Leader Joe Clark, New Democrat Stuart Leggatt and others accused the government of attempting to muzzle the commission's investigation in to the treatment of seven Jamaican women ordered deported last month.

They said the court action, launched Monday, contravenes Parliament's intention that the federal Human Rights Act cover all government departments and agencies.

There was no justification for challenging the human rights commission's jurisdiction over the immigration department, which engages in activities affecting millions of Canadians, immigrants and refugees.

The MPs made their case in the Commons where Immigration Minister Bud Cullen said he does not think the human rights legislation applies to his department.

Immigration legislation already provides a series of appeal procedures for persons who do not like decisions the department makes about them, Cullen said.

"Having gone through all those appeal procedures, we would have another follow-up at the taxpayer's expense, a whole new procedure instituted by the human rights legislation," Cullen said.

Outside the Commons, Clark rejected this argument in an interview, saying "the human rights commission is there to stop discrimination and if discrimination is occurring within the bureaucracy, that's no defence of it."

Cullen told reporters he does not want the commission to have access to internal department documents it seeks in the case of the Jamaican women in Toronto who claim they were ordered deported because of their sex and race.

Manitoba Insurance Surplus

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba Public Insurance Corp. reported a net surplus of $9 million in its annual report for the 1977-78 fiscal year tabled in the legislature Tuesday.

The total conforms with unaudited figures released in December when increases in automobile insurance rates were announced.

The corporation's automobile division contributed $8.2 million to the surplus and the general insurance division contributed $800,000.

The government insurance corporation wrote $116.6 million in premiums during its fiscal year, which ends Oct. 31, and reported an increase in assets of $22.2 million.

The corporation's assets now total $119.5 million.

The surplus was funnelled into increased catastrophe and contingency funds and $3.6 million was allocated to the rate stabilization reserve.

Gay MLA Rumored In Sask.

REGINA (CP) — Premier Allan Blakeney accused Opposition Leader Dick Collver of spreading rumors that there is a homosexual in the cabinet — rumors he would not dare repeat outside the legislature.

The exchange in the legislature Tuesday started when Collver said the premier should deny a report that a cabinet minister was homosexual or investigate the charge.

Collver said that Brian Currie, president of the Saskatoon Gay Community, had said in a radio broadcast that there are homosexuals in both the NDP and Conservative party, including a member of the cabinet.

In an interview Tuesday, Currie said he based his remark on statistics of the percentage of the population that is homosexual. He did not know whether there was a homosexual cabinet minister.

Collver said a homosexual cabinet minister left himself open to blackmail because he would be ashamed to admit to his sexual orientation.

Blakeney told Collver it was typical of the Conservatives to make charges without names.

Hustle, Business Told

RENFREW, Ont. (CP) — Defence Minister Barney Danson told operators of small businesses to get out and hustle some of the billions of dollars in government business available to them.

He was in this Ottawa Valley community about 130 kilometres west of Ottawa to tour Magline Industries, which produces arctic equipment for his department.

He told an audience small and medium entrepreneurs should find out more what kind of service the government needs from them and then go after the business that is available.

He said major bidders on government contracts — especially in the area of defence — are looking for small industries to help fulfill their contracts as subcontractors.

Case of English-Only Ticket Awaits Appeal Court Verdict

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba Court of Appeal has reserved decision in the challenge against Manitoba's Official Languages Act being championed by St. Boniface businessman Georges Forest.

Forest's fight to have the act overturned began in 1976 when he was given a traffic ticket and refused to pay because it was written in English only.

Since then he has gone through a number of courts and finally won permission to appeal to the province's highest legal authority.

The challenge involves both the Official Languages Act and the Manitoba Act of 1870, which was passed to establish the province.

The Manitoba Act names both English and French as official languages in the province but the legislature later passed the Official Languages Act to make English the only official language to be used in the legislature and courts.

Lawyers for Forest argue that only the British Parliament, which ratified the Manitoba Act in 1871, has the authority to overturn any section of the act.

But A. Kerr Twaddle, lawyer for the province, said the British North America Act gives the province the right to ammend its own constitution.

There was no indication when a ruling would be made in the case.

Worst Frost Since '35

the prairies

WINNIPEG (CP) — The City of Winnipeg is spending thousands of dollars a day thawing out water pipes frozen after months of cold weather.

"This has been the worst winter for frost-degree days since 1935, and one of the worst winters for frozen water pipes the city has experienced for a long time," said Rod McRae, director of city operations.

McRae says it costs the city about $50 a call to thaw pipes, and the problem is expected to continue well into the spring.

"Some of the pipes in the older buildings is only a few feet deep and well within the range of the kind of frost we've had this year. Most of the frost in the city is about 7½ feet deep."

City water director Sandy Penman says once frozen pipes are thawed, residents are being asked to run water from a tap until the frost begins to leave the ground.

"Running water is about the only way of preventing freezing again," he said. "The city will adjust their bills so it won't cost them anything. It's inconvenient, but there is not much else we can do."

MD Fine $18,700

REGINA (CP) — Dr. Wayne Squires, 49, a Weyburn physician, has been fined $18,700 after conviction earlier this month on a charge of conspiracy to evade payment of income tax in 1975.

The charge involved non-payment of tax on income of $39,000 after donation of paintings to the Crown at an overstated value. The overstated value was claimed unlawfully as a tax deduction.

Squires was acquitted by Judge J. J. Flynn on a charge of making a false statement in his 1975 income tax return.

City Plans Appeal

RED DEER (CP) — The Red Deer regional planning commission will appeal directly to Municipal Affairs Minister Dick Johnston for more money for the coming year, according to commission director Bob Cundy.

The commission has to prepare 33 regional plans on an allotment of $1,217,000. It has estimated expenditures at $1,378,000.

Nursing Contract

SASKATOON (CP) — A new two-year contract will give 1,300 Saskatchewan nursing home employees a 7.5-per-cent salary increase, retroactive to Jan. 1, 1978, and six per cent this year.

The memorandum of agreement was signed by the Saskatchewan Association of Special Care Homes and the Canadian Union of Public Employee, representing the nursing home staff.

Hutterites to Court

SASKATOON (CP) — A judge was asked to dismiss a motion intended to keep five rural affairs department employees from testifying in the trial of a Hutterite colony charged under the planning act.

Lawyer Ron Barclay said evidence from the five officials is necessary to prove that his client, Vanguard Hutterite Bretheren Inc., a colony near Whiska Creek, Sask., was the subject of religious discrimination in the passage of a rural planning resolution.

Mr. Justice R. A. MacDonald, who heard the arguments in Court of Queen's Bench chambers, reserved judgment without specifying a date.

MOOSE JAW (CP) — Baildon rural municipal councillors say they have been left out of discussions involving a proposed dam on Moose Jaw Creek and they don't want it.

Reeve Gordon E. Tysdal of Briercrest said council is put out about not being consulted because the proposed structure would go about three miles downstream from the Baildon municipal boundary and would affect farm land and roads in the municipality.

Hill Site Favored

EDMONTON (CP) — Mayor Cec Purves says he wants Edmonton's proposed convention centre built on the Grierson Hill site, despite a possible cost jump of between $4 million and $8 million because of unstable soil conditions on the slope.

"I want to see the convention centre built on the site we've chosen," Purves said Sunday, noting that if the centre is moved up the hill, into the city's business core, it would be built on land worth more than $10 million.

The city will have to pay between $2 million and $4 million to stablize Grierson Hill if the complex is not built there, Purves said.

Grain Car Deal Made

GLASLYN, Sask. (CP) — CP Rail will join the federal goverment in financing the repair of 1,000 rail cars for grain transportation, says Transport Minister Otto Lang.

He said during a visit here today that the repairs will cost about $7,000 for each car. Many of them are up to 40 years old and normally would have been scrapped.

Canadian National Railways agreed to a similar program last fall.

TV Satellite Pickup Open to All

OTTAWA (CP) — Broadcasters, cable systems and common carriers of communication signals such as telephone companies will be allowed to own their own satellite earth stations under a new policy announced Tuesday by Communications Minister Jeanne Sauve.

The earth stations will allow their owners to receive signals from Canadian satellites. Formerly only Telesat Canada was allowed to own the stations.

Cable television officials say they will act within weeks to set up a cable satellite network to carry such services as live parliamentary debates, their own public affairs shows and other programming.

Michael Hind-Smith, president of the Canadian Cable Television Association, said the new policy "promises some exciting new possibilities for national programming services that cable subscribers will want to receive."

Ted Jarmain, chairman of the proposed network, Cable Satellite Network Ltd., said the new policy also brings a pay television network closer to reality.

He said the new programming would not bump any existing stations off the regular cable channels. It would be made available on converter service if the regular channels are filled.

The minister emphasized that the earth stations would be licenced only to receive programs from Canadian satellites.

Jarmain said the cable companies would be in the market for between 50 and 100 earth stations. They cost about $35,000 apiece.

"I am confident that the new policy, in greatly improving access to satellite service, will provide new opportunities for the extension of TV programming in Canada," Mme. Sauve said in a statement.

Cable operators already have established Cable Satellite Network Ltd. for delivery of a program package across the country by satellite.

The cable companies must first get permission for the network from the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission.

Mme. Sauve said the policy could be of particular help to remote and rural areas. Community groups obtaining broadcast licences could now apply for receive-only earth stations.

Tardy Police to Pay $20,000 for Delay

TORONTO (CP) — An elderly couple who sued the Ontario Provincial Police for not responding quickly will receive $20,000 in an out-of-court settlement.

Kenneth Willman, 68, and his wife, Mary, 63, of Keswick, Ont., had initiated a suit for $750,000 against the OPP for negligence after they were found unconscious at their cottage near Parry Sound four years ago.

The incident occurred when the couple's daughter, Julia Jamieson of Waterloo, Ont., telephoned the OPP at Parry Sound to ask for a search of the cottage because her mother had missed a dentist's appointment.

An OPP constable went the next morning to find the couple unconscious from propane gas fumes that leaked from a defective refrigerator.

Gov't Cuts Hit Women Hardest

By RON CLINGEN
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Opposition MPs added a new twist Tuesday to ongoing complaints about discrimination against women in the public service.

NDP House leader Stanley Knowles and Conservative federal-provincial relations critic Flora MacDonald backed a new charge of "gross discrimination" with figures showing more women than men are being laid off during the current government restraint program.

Knowles said statistics released Tuesday revealed 56 per cent of the restraint layoffs in the professional and scientific category were women even though women made up only 23 per cent of the employees in that category.

MacDonald suggested the figures indicate the government is abandoning its "supposed commitment" to proportional representation in the public service.

She wanted Treasury Board President Judd Buchanan to table figures showing how many men and how many women are being laid off in each of the categories "so we will know exactly whether the discrimination that the figures now before us show is indeed true."

She wanted figures showing, individual by individual, where cutbacks have taken place.

Buchanan argued that significant progress in bringing women into the public service has been made in recent years. In the past four years, he told the Commons, some 21,443 women entered the public service compared to 16,800 men.

"We have moved up from a little over 31 per cent to about 35 per cent women in the public service," he pointed out.

Since the majority of new employees hired were women, Buchanan reasoned more women would be among the first to go since "it is normal policy that the people most recently hired ar the first laid off."

MacDonald countered that present moves under the layoff program will reverse the whole trend towards bringing in more women.

Knowles suggested the treasury board president should borrow, and put to work in the public service itself, some of the members of the government task force now trying to sell private industry on hiring more women.

Ottawa to Run Quebec Vote?

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government would be willing to conduct a joint referendum in Quebec on the province's future in Confederation, John Reid, federal-provincial relations minister, said Tuesday.

"I would be prepared to discuss the mechanism to do it," Reid told the Commons justice committee.

In order for a joint referendum to be held, the two levels of govenment would have to agree on a question and the election machinery governing the vote, Reid said.

He doubted Quebec would be willing to join the federal government in such a venture.

The Liberal government has introduced legislation saying it might conduct its own referendum — in Quebec or perhaps in all of Canada — on the issue of Quebec independence.

The government would resign if the majority of Canadians voted in favor of Quebec sovereignty-association although the government is not forced by the proposed legislation to accept its results, Reid said.

The federal referendum bill does not force the government to accept the results of a vote but Reid said it would feel a moral obligation to resign if it lost.

Prime Minister Trudeau has said he would never lead a government which negotiated sovereignty-association with Quebec. Conservative Leader Joe Clark has also said he would never negotiate sovereignty-association.

Conservative MPs expressed the fear Tuesday that a federal referendum campaign will give separatists a vehicle subsidized by all Canadian taxpayers to promote their cause.

Provincial parties such as the Parti Quebecois could participate in a federal referendum campaign and receive federal subsidies while federal parties are excluded from Quebec's referendum legislation.

Quebec Embassy 'Error'

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec government says it did not request its office in Paris to be listed as an embassy in the city's telephone directory.

The decision was made unilaterally by the editor of the Paris telephone directory, Intergovernmental Affairs Minister Claude Morin said in a statement Tuesday.

The listing in the recently-published directory had raised some eyebrows in the Canadian Embassy. Only sovereign countries can be represented in foreign nations by full-fledged embassies and despite its aspirations towards independence, Quebec's office has the status of a delegation.

Postal Ruling Delayed

OTTAWA (CP) — The mediator-arbitrator in the postal dispute has been granted another extension, to March 31, to finish his difficult task of drafting contract recommendations in the dispute between the government and the Canadian Union of Postal Workers.

Lucien Tremblay, former chief justice of the Quebec Court of Appeal, was originally assigned to complete his task by the end of January. His work unfinished, he asked for an extension to today and now has requested an extra month.

The union, without a contract since June 30, 1977, was ordered by Parliament last October to end a legal national strike.

Excessive Security Blocks Reviewed

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais said Tuesday he has ordered review of a security directive that a Conservative MP says is responsible for thousands of Canadians being passed over for classified jobs.

Blais made his statement in reply to one by Conservative Frank Oberle that the directive denies basic human rights to one out of three foreign-born Canadians.

The directive, disclosed recently by Conservative Elmer MacKay of Central Nova, N.S., says top security clearance should be denied to certain persons, not because of doubts as to loyalty or reliability, but because of such circumstances as:

—Close relatives living within the borders of such foreign nations as may cause them to be subjected to intolerable pressures.

—Residence within the last 10 years in countries where no check of activities is possible.

Blais told Oberle that the directive goes back to 1965.

Oberle said in an interview the directive has been applied "effectively and aggressively.". He knew of dozens of persons who had been passed over for promotion because they could not get the top security clearance.

He said he believes there are thousands of others in the same position.

Recompense Treu: PC

OTTAWA .(CP) — The government went out of its way to prosecute Montreal engineer Alexander Peter Treu under the Official Secrets Act and, now that he has been acquitted, it should pay him recompense, Gerald Baldwin (PC—Peace River) said Tuesday.

Baldwin's move for a Commons debate on the matter was refused unanimous consent by Liberals.

Freu was found guilty, after a secret trial, of violating the secrets act through his handling of North Atlantic Treaty Organization documents.

The Quebec Court of Appeal overturned the conviction and the government said this week it will not appeal the acquittal.

Helping Treu with his $22,000 in legal bills wouldn't set a precedent, Baldwin added. The government had decided to pay Jean-Pierre Goyer's legal bills in his defence against a libel suit by a subordinate launched when Goyer was supply minister.

1 in 3 Dedicated To Job: Survey

TORONTO (CP) — Only one Canadian worker in three is dedicated to his job, a University of Pennsylvania professor said Tuesday at a York University conference on the quality of working life.

Studies show that 50 per cent of Canadian workers would take the same job again, while 85 per cent feel their job is "all right," said Eric Trist, a visiting professor at York.

Spokesmen for business and labor described plans to improve the quality of working life.

For the last 14 years, Steinberg's Ltd. has conducted programs for employees at four Miracle Mart supermarkets, said Albert Alon, Steinberg's vice-president of human resources.

"We open the books to the employees and teach them how to draw up a budget," Alon said.

A United Auto Workers official said his union offers programs that give individual workers credit for participating in decisions on the job.

Bill Horner, an administrative assistant, said a program at a General Motors assembly plant in Tarrytown, N.Y., had reversed a pattern of high turnover and absenteeism, poor product quality and low productivity.

Among 18 assembly plants, the Tarrytown operation ranked first in product quality after the program's introduction.

Killers Got $4, Bus Ticket

WELLAND, Ont. (CP) — Two men who killed a man during a robbery which netted them $4 and a bus ticket were convicted Tuesday of second-degree murder.

Leonard Robert Stewart, 27, of Merced, Calif., and James Reginald Currie, 31, of Niagara Falls, Ont., had pleaded not guilty to a charge of first-degree murder. The Ontario Supreme Court jury convicted them of the lesser offence for the stabbing death of a Niagara Falls man last July.

The body of Milton William Roth, 38, was found in bushes on Ontario Hydro property in Niagara Falls. Roth had been stabbed at least 34 times.

Retirement 'Up to Boss'

OTTAWA (CP) — Kellogg Salada Canada Inc. says employers, not the government, should decide what age workers must retire from their jobs.

"Legislation to abolish mandatory retirement ages is undesirable," the United States-based company, employing 1,700 Canadians, said in a brief Tuesday to the special Senate committee on retirement age policies.

The company said employers should determine what age employees should retire. Employees who want to postpone standard retirement should be allowed "only with company consent in exceptional circumstances."

Normal retirement age at Kellogg's five food-producing plants is 65 although earlier or later retirement is permitted in a few cases.

"The government should not take legislative action unless the hardship or abuse to be relieved is clearly greater than the total costs of new legislation," it said.

"The onus of proof should be on the government that changes are essential."

The Senate committee is examining whether the government should outlaw mandatory retirement so that workers can retire according to their will and ability to work and their financial position.

Kellogg also said the government should not make pension indexing compulsory or attempt to force the standardization of all pension plans so that workers who change jobs can transfer pension credits.

Canadian Dollar Fair at 75 Cents

GANANOQUE, Ont. (CP) — The Canadian dollar is too high in relation to the United States dollar, Frank Maine, Liberal member of Parliament for Wellington, said Monday.

It should be 75 cents U.S. instead of 83 cents, he told students at a secondary school in this community 30 kilometres east of Kingston.

Canadian wages increased to 10-per-cent higher than U.S wages in 1975 from 25-per-cent lower in 1965, he said.

"Production did not increase and the Canadian dollar was over-valued."

With almost a quarter of Canada's gross national product going to exports and two-thirds of that to the U.S., Maine said devaluation of the dollar was a way to make Canada competitive.

Homosexual Ruling Hard For Primate

OTTAWA (CP) — Anglican Bishop William Robinson of Ottawa says he would find it hard to ordain a homosexual priest even if he supported an unofficial Anglican Church ruling permitting such a step.

He indicated in an interview Tuesday he shares some of society's reluctance about homosexuals in the priesthood. But he supported the principle of allowing such people into the priesthood providing they were no longer practising homosexuals.

Robinson said it is ultimately up to the bishop to decide whether to ordain a priest in his diocese.

"I have no plans to ordain a homosexual so that although I agree with the statement and voted for it, I didn't have to for personal reasons," he said.

Asked if he would ordain a homosexual if he were asked, he said he would "find it difficult."

The homosexual issue was heavily discussed by the Anglican House of Bishops in Ottawa recently. The bishops decided that everyone, regardless of sexual orientation, is equal before God. But they also ruled against accepting homosexual marriages.

Robinson said everyone is understood to have male and female tendencies in his makeup.

The Anglican Church was simply trying to be more open about the homosexual problem which was kept quiet in the church in the past.

Divorce Laws Cause Perjury

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — North American divorce laws force as many as 37 per cent of the people involved to perjure themselves in order to get divorces, says a United States sociologist who conducted a survey on the subject.

"About one-third of the people in our study admitted they committed a perjury in their hearings by saying they lied or trumped up statements to make sure that the judgments turned out the way it was 'supposed to be'," says Dr. Graham Spanier of Pennsylvania State University.

He told Guelph community counsellors and faculty members of the University of Guelph on Thursday the laws and the intervention of lawyers make adversaries of dissenting spouses.

The law pits husbands against wives "from the moment a lawyer is contacted and it has a role in preventing reconciliation," he said.

OTTAWA (CP) — Two public service staff associations urged the government today to continue paying cost-of-living increases to retired public servants to protect them against inflation.

A spokesman for the Economists, Sociologists and Statisticians Association (ESSA) told the Commons miscellaneous estimates committee that a bill to limit such increases would leave retired public servants unable to cope with rising prices, especially if the rate of inflation reaches 15 per cent or higher, as it has in Britain.

"Do we have to wait for a whole generation of pensioners to be wiped out before revising this plan?" Harley Potter, an economist with Statistics Canada, asked.

ESSA called the bill a reactionary response to pressure from the private pension industry, which thinks the government plan is overly generous.

Under terms of the legislation, pensions for some 157,000 former public servants, servicemen, Mounties and their widows would no longer be indexed to rise automatically with the cost of living as they have since 1974. Instead, increases to offset the effects of inflation would be given from time to time.

Schooling Scrooges 'Cheating Children'

Children are being cheated out of a complete eduation because adults are too stingy to foot the bill, television personality Laurier LaPierre told a teachers conference at the University of Victoria on Tuesday.

Education spending should be unlimited, said LaPierre, a CKVU broadcaster who is also an Ontario education commissioner.

He said children should have the freedom to experience all aspects of life and shouldn't be denied that right because society is afraid of the cost.

Youth is disillusioned because it has been disappointed and bored by the school system, LaPierre said.

The three Rs are irrelevent in modern technological society, and grading is a violation of the uniqueness of children.

LaPierre said the school system is convenient for adults, not children; it is full of time tables and curriculums designed to emphasize normality, rather than excellence and many students can't function properly inside its confines.

"There is no such thing as a learning disability. There are only learned disabilities. Children have acquired them because the system has made them disabled."

Another guest speaker, University of California professor Dr. Arthur Pearl, also advocated modernization of the education system to meet demands of the future.

Grades should be eliminated and traditional core curriculum subjects de-emphasized.

Shawnigan Scholarships 'Substantial'

Shawnigan Lake School today announced a scholarship program for boys entering the independent school for the academic year beginning in September.

Headmaster Darrel Farrant said about one-third of the pupils entering will qualify for the scholarships, which represent a substantial reduction in fees.

Examinations for the scholarships will be held at the school in early April and will consist of English and mathematics papers in conjunction with an interview.

Parents can write for details to the Director of Admissions, Shawnigan Lake School, Shawnigan Lake, V0R 2W0.

Kamloops Council Bumps Salaries

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Council voted Tuesday to accept a recommendation giving its members a salary increase of more than five per cent in each of the next two years.

The increase will bring Mayor Mike Latta's salary to $27,950 this year and $29,500 in 1980.

Aldermen will receive $8,930 this year and $9,430 next year.

Tony Romano, chairman of a committee which recommended the increases, said the figures were reached after a study was made of salaries of other elected officials in British Columbia.

A Zero Was Missing

For want of a zero — dropped somewhere in the processing — a Times story Tuesday said the provincial government had given the new Lions Society handicapped camp a grant of only $25,000 rather than $250,000.

The lottery cash will help the society to pay off two major financial encumbrances, leaving a relatively small mortgage on the Shawnigan Lake property.

CRAIG CLAIBORNE

Recipes Using Wine

Last week Claiborne wrote at some length of general principles relating to cooking with wines and spirits. Today, he offers dishes which illustrate those principles.)

Spaghetti With Cognac and Sour Cream Sauce

2 tablespoons olive oil
¼ cup butter
2 cups finely chopped onions
1 teaspoon finely chopped garlic
1 pound ground round or sirloin steak
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1 can tomatoes with tomato paste, 2 pounds, 3 ounce size (or use 5 cups canned tomatoes and 3 tablespoons tomato paste)

Spray carefully when you're deodorizing a room. If the sprayer isn't giving out a fine mist, droplets on wood may be enough moisture to white-spot a wooden table top. You'll then have to rub the spots with an oil (vegetable or baby) and fine powder (cigarette ashes, whiting, talc). Or rub in spirits of camphor from your medicine chest.

60-MINUTE GOURMET

Clam-Oyster Chowder

By PIERRE FRANEY

I don't know of any dish more gratifying than a well-made chowder served on a cold, midwinter day.

One of my favorite recipes for the dish is also the simplest. It contains potatoes, onions and fish. That is the way I prepared it recently in my home. And as often happens, I discovered another optional element in my refrigerator: a pint of shucked oysters. I added them to the dish and it was a natural. If you add the oysters, take care that they are only heated through or they toughen quickly.

A hot loaf of French bread stuffed with herbs and heated through is an excellent accompaniment.

FISH AND OYSTER CHOWDER

1 pound potatoes, scraped
½ pound onions, peeled
1½ pounds skinless, boneless flounder or other fish fillets
2 tablespoons butter
1 pint shucked oysters with their liquor
1 cup water, approximately
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1 bay leaf
2 cups milk
1 cup heavy cream or an additional cup of milk
⅛ teaspoon cayenne pepper.

1. Cut the potatoes into ½-inch thick slices. Stack the slices and cut them into ¼-inch wide strips. Cut the strips into ¼-inch cubes. As the potatoes are cut drop them into cold water to prevent discoloration. There should be about two cups.

2. Chop the onions. There should be about 1½ cups finely chopped.

3. There may be a small bone line running down the centre of each fillet. If so, cut on either side of this bone line and discard it. Cut the fish into one-inch cubes.

4. Heat the butter in a small casserole or large saucepan. Add the onions and cook, stirring often, until wilted. Add the oyster liquor and enough water to make one cup. Add the potatoes. There should be enough liquid to barely cover the potatoes. Bring to boil.

5. Add salt, pepper and bay leaf. Cover and simmer until potatoes are tender, about 12 minutes. Do not overcook.

6. Add the milk, one cup heavy cream and fish. Add cayenne, salt and pepper. Bring just to the boil and stir gently. Add the oysters and turn off the heat. Heat through, but do not cook further. Serve n hot bowls with herbed French bread.

Yield: 4 servings.

HERBED FRENCH BREAD

1 loaf French bread
4 to 8 tablespoons butter
½ cup finely chopped parsley
1 tablespoon finely chopped garlic.

1. Preheat oven to 400 deg. F.

2. Split open the bread lengthwise.

3. Melt the butter and add the parsely and garlic. Spoon the mixture down the centre of the bread and reshape it. Wrap in foil and place in the oven. Bake 30 minutes.

Yield: 4 servings.

Homemade Yogurt Needs Only 15 Minutes

The making of yogurt at home can be a simple procedure taking 15 minutes to prepare. The three- to four-hour incubation period needs no supervision until three hours have passed. And no special equipment is required.

Benefits of yogurt for young and old are now being discussed by many of the medical profession so that it is no longer considered a passing whim for homemakers to make a steady supply every five days — the life span for fine yogurt made without stabilizers.

Yogurt is very much a living food, of delicate balance; heat much over 37 deg. C (98-99 deg. F) destroys the beneficial bacteria, as will a freezing temperature of 0 deg. C. (32 deg. F). The incubating temperature needs to be kept steadily between 36 and 38 deg. C. for three hours to set the made-up yogurt mixture to a pleasant, smooth thick product. It will not be so solid as the purchased product because no additional stabilizer is used in homemade yogurt. The jars of yogurt are kept on the refrigerator shelf — temperature 4 deg. C.

The starting culture may be a small container of the commercial yogurt you find most palatable; or buy packaged powdered culture which costs more. In either case, five fresh batches of three 16-fluid-ounce (450 mL) jars of yogurt can be made by using part of the last jar as starter for the next batch. This keeps the cost down, and quality is perfect. After the fifth batch I find the texture becomes thinner than we like, and slightly more acid.

I do not put fruit or other flavorings into yogurt when making it, so that the product can be used in salads, soups, on fruits or other desserts, or on a dish of homemade granola breakfast food.

hilda beastall

For diets medically restricted in salt, fat and sugar and thus also low in calories, homemade yogurt is an easily produced, low-priced food.

Here is the recipe that I have used for eight years. Because it is made with half the liquid amount of skimmed milk, and the other half of evaporated, and no salt or sugar added, this yogurt will fit many diets. To cut further to a fat-free content, try it by doubling the skim milk powder to three cups, and using four cups of water.

If you are on a strict diet submit the following recipe to the counselling nutritionist recommended by your doctor; you will then know whether it meets your requirements.

Apart from diets, this is just a delicate yogurt of good texture to be used freely at all meals as part of the day's milk allowance.

For all those people who say they don't like and will not use milk, adding yogurt to meals is the way to get the benefits of milk proteins, vitamins and minerals, without drinking it and without the fat content if that too is desirable.

HOMEMADE LOW-FAT YOGURT

- 2 cups hot water (tap)
- 1½ cups skim milk powder
- 1 small can evaporated milk with warm water added to make two cups liquid.
- 3 Tbsp. (heaping) yogurt as starter.

Mix all together in large saucepan with whisk.

Pour into three 16-ounce jars (or equivalent) warmed.

Have ready a large saucepan with tight-fitting lid. Into it put an inch of hot water but not scalding. Then lower jars of yogurt carefully into the water. It should come no higher than halfway up the jars. Put aside the jar lids to use when storing in fridge.

Now if you have a suitable thermometer, test the water in the pan for temperature between 36 and 38 deg. C. A clinical (fever) thermometer will do when carefully washed, if you have no cooking thermometer.

Put on the close-fitting pan lid and wrap the pan completely in a warmed wollen sweater (or similar) and place carefully, without spilling, into a constantly warm place where the temperature will not change.

This can be on a shelf near the hot water tank in the kitchen with wool wraps touching the tank for continuous heat.

After 15 minutes, open the wraps just enough to feel the warmth of the water inside the pan, and the outside of the pan. Both should have the comforting warmth of a baby's warm bath: not hot, but more than tepid. Test with thermometer.

If the temperature satisfied you (or you have a thermometer), cover up closely again and leave the yogurt to incubate for three hours. Whatever source of heat you use, it should not fluctuate during this period.

If you find the water cooler than the 36 deg. C, add just enough hot water at the side of the jars from a small jug to bring the temperature back. Yogurt will not set if water is cooler.

After three hours, lift one jar of yogurt, tilting it sideways just enough to see if the texture is that of a set custard. If set, remove all jars from the pan and put on the jar lids.

Dry the jars on the outside, and put at once into the refrigerator for a few hours to cool. It will become thicker.

Use the yogurt within five days; part of the last jar is the activator or starter for the next batch. And so on for five batches.

With this recipe for yogurt you can make 15 jars (each with 450 mL contents) for a total cost of five small cans evaporated milk ($1.33), 7½ cups powdered skim milk ($1.25) and starter yogurt (about 25 cents for the first batch). Approximate cost for five batches comes to $2.85 or 57 cents for three jars each containing 450 mL.

There is no extra cost of heat supply with this method, and no hidden cost of equipment. Time in making the mixture is 15 minutes.

The Kitchen Has Changed

cooking with kay

By KAY SPICER

Old cookbooks are fascinating. Every now and then I pick up one from my collection and leaf through the time worn pages. From The Home Cookbook, dated 1877 and compiled by the women of Toronto and chief cities and towns in Canada, I get a wonderful feeling of what it was like 100 years ago working in a kitchen preparing meals. There have been changes.

Here are a few items listed as necessary in the kitchen of a small family. Woodenware included a wash bench; wash tubs (three sizes); wash board; bosom board; skirt board; flour barrel cover; clothes bars and clothes pins. Tinware and ironware pieces listed are boilers for clothes and ham; bread pans; milk pans, dippers; quart, pint, half-pint and gill measures, three scoops; horse radish grater; soap shaker; iron spoons of different sizes; toasting rack and ice pick.

Stoneware crocks of various sizes are a must along with brushes and a blacking brush for the stove. These utensils have become antiquated and collectors pay neat prices for them.

Today kitchen utensils and appliances are more convenient and time-saving. Thank goodness.

The recipes — tried, tested and proven — left a lot to guesswork. Terms like on small or one large cup of sugar, butter the size of an egg, a handful of flour, appear throughout the cookbook. No oubt there were many flops until a feel for cooking developed.

Of the tried and proven recipes, here are a few I think are interesting. I've tested them so try my version for best results.

JELLY MERINGUE PUDDING

One pint of stale bread crumbs, one quart of milk, the yolks of four eggs, butter the size of an egg, a small cup of sugar, salt, the grated rind of one lemon; bake three-quarters of an hour.

When cool, spread the top with preserves or jelly. Beat the whites of the eggs with five tablespoons of pulverized sugar; spread on the pudding, and brown in a quick oven; eat with cream.

1979 Metric Recipe:

JELLY MERINGUE PUDDING

Makes 8 Servings

- 500 ml. dry bread crumbs
- 1 l. (1000 ml) milk
- 125 ml. soft butter
- 250 ml. sugar
- 2 ml. salt
- Grated peel of 1 lemon
- 4 eggs, separated
- 125 ml. raspberry jelly or jam

Mix together bread crumbs and milk. Cream butter with 200 ml. sugar. Add salt and grated lemon peel. Beat egg yolks until creamy; add to sugar mixture.

Stir into bread crumb mixture. Pour into a lightly greased 1.5 l. casserole or baking dish. Bake in a 350 deg. F. oven for 30 to 35 minutes or until pudding springs back when lightly touched.

Cool then spread with raspberry jelly or jam. Beat egg whites until light and frothy. Add 50ml. sugar and continue beating until meringue stands in firm, glossy peaks.

Spread over jelly topped pudding, bringing meringue right to the edges of the baking dish. Bake in 180 deg. C. (350 deg. F.) oven for 15 minutes or until meringue is delicately browned.

1877 Recipe:

LEMON TOAST

Take the yolks of four eggs, beat them well and add one pint of sweet milk. Take baker's bread and cut into slices. Dip them into the milk and eggs and lay them into a spider with sufficient melted butter hot to fry a delicate brown.

Take the whites of the four eggs and beat them to a froth. Add a half large cup of white sugar and the juice of one lemon; beating well and adding one cup to boiling water. Serve over the toast as a sauce, and you will find it a very delicious dish.

1979 Version:

LEMON TOAST

Makes 6 Servings

- 4 eggs, separated
- 2 cups milk
- 6 to 8 slices bread
- 2 to 3 tablespoons butter
- ⅓ cup sugar
- Juice of 1 lemon
- 1 cup boiling water

Beat together egg yolks and milk. Dip bread slices in egg mixture to soak each side. Heat butter in a large frying pan or griddle. Fry dipped bread slices on each side until a nice delicate brown.

Place on a warm plate. Beat egg whites until frothy; gradually beat in sugar, a little at a time, and lemon juice. Beat until firm glossy peaks form. Beat in boiling water. Serve as sauce over warm toast.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: Last Saturday I was to meet a friend in a store so we could shop together. I got there a little early and walked around checking prices. I had been in the store often, and even paid my utility bills there. My friend was late, so I walked out to see if perhaps she had misunderstood and was waiting for me outside.

To my surprise, the store manager followed me and made me go back into the store and empty my purse out on the counter! My knees started to shake and my heart was pounding and I started to cry. It was the most humiliating experience of my life.

After the manager saw that I had taken nothing, he just said, "Sorry." Then he walked away.

It still brings a tear to my eye and a lump to my throat when I think of it. I'm a six-time grandma in my 50s and it hurt me to be taken for a thief.

My neighbor tells me that if a person is searched for shoplifting and is found to be innocent, she can sue the store for false arrest. Is that right? — READER

DEAR READER: You can't sue for false arrest unless you've been arrested. But if you're wrongfully accused of shoplifting you should see a lawyer.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is of a highly confidential nature, and I would feel much more comfortable writing to you in care of a post office box than my hometown newspaper.

If this can be done, will you kindly publish your P.O. Box number? Thank you — SMALL TOWN MAN WITH BIG PROBLEMS

DEAR MAN: Yes. It's P.O. Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069.

DEAR ABBY: I have recently taken a job which requires me to work very close to a dentist. (Sometimes our faces are only a few inches apart and that's close!)

My first day on the job I noticed that my boss must have had onions or garlic for breakfast. Whew! I figured, "Well, that can happen to anybody once in a while."

After lunch there was no improvement. In fact, it was worse! I don't know where he goes for lunch, but he comes back smelling like a delicatessen.

This dentist's offices are in one of the best professional buildings in town and his patients are well-to-do and very particular. I can't understand why one of them doesn't tell him. If I were a patient, I surely would, but I only work here.

Any suggestions? I don't know how much longer I can take this. And I'd look awfully silly working with a gas mask, or a clothespin on my nose. — DENTIST'S ASSISTANT

DEAR ASSISTANT: Speak up! He may appreciate it. (P.S. If he does't, your next job has got to be better!)

Drug Eases Kidney Stone Pain

your health

By L. L. Coleman, MD

Anyone who has ever had a kidney stone or a stone in the ureter, the tube that carries urine from the kidney to the bladder, knows the intensity of the accompanying pain.

Recently, Dr. Dan E. W. Holmlund, of the University Hospital in Umea, Sweden, found that an intravenous injection of indo-methacin can rapidly relieve the severity of such pain. In a group of about 50 patients with stones in the ureter, the results have been remarkably successful. In his cases, Dr. Holmlund found there were no adverse effects by this technique.

When this concept was first reported at a meeting of the American College of Surgeons, many objections were interposed. Yet, a number of urologists have undertaken to repeat these studies in the hope that they can substantitate the beneficial effect of this form of treatment.

If their findings duplicate those of Dr. Holmlund, this may be a tremendous contribution to those who are plagued by recurrent episodes of kidney stones.

Astronauts flying in outer space are brilliantly monitored by the most complex engineering techniques and computerized devices. The scientific findings of astronaut monitoring are now being applied to children with cerebral palsy. At the Children's Hospital Medical Centre in Boston, Dr. Sheldon Simon has been using similar computerized methods for studying body movements and muscle tension in these handicapped children. He believes that he can get a much more definitive picture of what is wrong with these children and what can be done to benefit them.

The gastroscope is a cleverly devised instrument through which a doctor can carefully inspect every minute detail of the stomach wall. By direct visualization, photographs can be taken and later studied for the early detection of ulcers, tumors and even cancers of the stomach wall.

When necessary, small pieces of tissue can be removed from suspicious areas. These, then, are studied under a miroscope for the presence of early cancerous signs.

This is of vital importance because it adds a significant diagnostic technique to the routine X-ray studies that are normally made.

Gastroscopy has a number of advantages. It can be performed safely and painlessly under mild, general anesthesia in about 15 minutes. It also serves to reduce the exposure to radiation when repeated X-rays are necessary.

Microwave Oven Safety Controvery Goes On

By MARIAN BURROS
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Are microwave ovens safe?

Of course, says the industry. Of course not, say scientists such as Dr. Milton Zaret, who discovered the relationship between microwave radiation and cataracts.

How much this continuing controversy has affected the sales of a very expensive kitchen gadget is impossible to determine. Some retail appliance stores acknowledge, as one owner said, that "fear of radiation dangers is holding a lot of folks back."

This kind of statement infuriates manufacturers who insist that microwaves are absolutely safe. "There has never been a fatality connected with the use of microwave ovens," said Jane Pazlar, customer service manager for Litton Industries.

On the other side is Dr. Zaret, associate professor of clinical ophthalmology at New York University Medical Centre and one of the foremost opthalmological surgeons in the U.S. Dr. Zaret says the ovens aren't safe at all "because they are permitted to leak."

Susan Freeman, assistant to the president of Microwave Cooking Etc., a chain of stores that sells ovens and offers classes in their use, paused before she answered the question. "Let me hedge," Freeman said. "I feel that from all the information I have read, I find no reason to believe they are not safe."

But one of the authors of a government report on microwave radiation says he would not have the appliance in his home. Stuart Fleschman, who worked on the Government Accounting Office report, "More Protection From Microwave Radiation Hazards Needed," said, "I guess I'm conservative. Certainly some studies show the effects are cumulative. It's kind of tough to deal with because so little is known. Most peopole who look seriously at the area are concerned because no one knows if there is a safe threshold."

Fleschman went on to say he really doesn't feel there is a health hazard if the ovens meet government standards, "but I wouldn't have an oven, just because so little is known."

Those standards are set by the Food and Drug Administration's Bureau of Radiological Health (BRH), and they are based on occupational guidelines for exposure set more than 20 years ago. The man responsible for them, Herman Schwan, a professor at the University of Pennsylvania's school of engineering, told a 1968 Senate hearing the standards were "the best we can formulate on the basis of presently available knowledge." He acknowledged that they had been "crudely set" — and "badly need refinement."

Alan Anderson, chief of standards support staff at the Bureau of Radiological Health, acknowledges that scientists "don't know all the answers about chronic use in the home." Another BRH scientist, referring to the current FDA standard, puts it more strongly: "The standard was arbitrary and capricious."

Industry emission standards are lower than the government's. According to a Litton Industries vice-president, Verle Blaha, "We use about six-tenths milliwatts as an internal factory standard that doesn't change." He says the design of the microwave oven has "advanced to the point where there is no longer a concern for wear or transportation damage."

Part of the problem is lack of long-term studies. The radiation that comes from microwave ovens is only part of the radiation to which people are exposed every day. In one form or another, it comes not only from the sun but from radio signals, television antennae, diathermy machines, certain kinds of smoke detectors — and exposure levels increase every day.

Some manufacturers recommend operating a microwave oven at arm's length. Yet children often press their noses right up against the glass to see food cooking. People frequently lean on the ovens, which are not hot to the touch, while they are operating. It is not at all unusual, when a microwave is below the burners on a stove, to stand in front of the microwave oven, while it is on, stirring a pot.

Susan Freeman from Microwave Cooking Etc. says, "It's dumb for kids to press their noses against oven doors. FDA has not found that it can hurt you, but they advise you not to do so. Pregnant women shouldn't stand close either. They have not found that it will hurt you, but they advise against it."

Stew Shows Off Lamb Versatility

Lamb demonstrates its remarkable versatility in this classic Irish Stew. Traditional ingredients provide the flair and taste associated with the great cuisine of that country.

- 2 pounds stewing lamb
- 1 cup chopped onion
- 1½ cups grated potato
- 2½ cups water
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- ¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
- 4-5 medium potatoes, quartered
- 8 small or 6 medium whole yellow onions
- 2 tablespoons fresh chopped parsley.

Cut lamb into 1¼ inch (3 cm) cubes and place in saucepan with chopped onion, grated potato, water, salt and pepper. Bring to a boil, reduce heat and simmer covered for one hour.

Skim off excess grease. Add potatoes and onions and continue cooking for 45 minutes to one hour or until meat and vegetables are tender. Sprinkle with chopped parsley. Makes 4-6 servings.

Here Guests Receive Royal Treatment

By ELLEN L. SLOTT

VILLANOVA, Pa. (UPI) — Imagine having someone catering to your every wish, cooking your favorite foods, going out in the middle of the night to buy you a pack of cigarettes, having a cocktail ready when you get home.

In fact, imagine someone doing anything you ask, so long as it's within legal limits.

Dr. Jesse Jones and his wife, Sharon, operate just such a service for the wealthy traveller who wants more than a plushly decorated hotel suite.

"I look at it as creating a little magic in people's lives," Mrs. Jones, 27, said.

For $250 a day base, plus $50 for each additional person, "Be My Guest" rents out luxurious mansions from owners who are out of town and staffs then with a chef, cooks, maids and a resident manager who cater to every request of the guest.

The homes are stocked with soft, fluffy towels, fresh flowers, designer bedsheets and the client's favorite food.

Not all manses are suitable as "Be My Guest" homes. They must have unique features — swimming pools or game rooms — and preferably be secluded, Mrs. Jones, 34, said.

Many of the homes are located on Philadelphia's Main Line, but "Be My Guest" also operates dwellings in Boston, Atlantic City, Washington, D.C. and New York. Their clients have included entertainers Anthony Newley, Phyllis Diller, Natalie Cole and Sylvester Stallone.

Files are kept on all guests, listing their idiosyncrasies and perferences so after a couple days of acclimation, the staff knows exactly how they take their coffee and what kind of music they like.

"Maybe he doesn't like rock music or he only can sleep with a down pillow," Mrs. Jones said. "Everything is very specific and it all comes under the heading of good service."

The staff picks up on seemingly insignificant things that make a stay especially nice. Once, they overheard a guest saying she would love peach cobbler. Mrs. Jones called her mother in Santa Cruz, Calif. for her recipe and that evening surprised the delighted guest with the dessert.

"There's really nothing we won't do if it's in our means," Mrs. Jones said, "and most things are."

They jealously guard their guests' privacy, refusing to reveal any details of a particular stay.

Despite rental fees ranging from $1,000 to $10,000, many mansion owners are not easily persuaded to turn their homes over to strangers.

"I would say the bottom line for the most part is the celebrities themselves," Mrs. Jones said. "Also, we really make a special effort to do a super cleanup."

Would she rent out her own huge, beautiful manse in Villanova, Pa., equipped with such "necessities" as a California redwood hot tub and a five-foot-high TV screen?

"No, I'd feel very uncomfortable," she said. "I wouldn't want to."

When Mrs.Jones and her husband, who are expecting their first child, married more than two years ago, he was a business broker and she worked in advertising. They were used to renting hotel suites for $275 a night.

"It was out of our experience in hotels that we thought we could do better," Jones said.

So far, they say they have failed only once in trying to satisfy a guest. He wanted barbecue goat for a party that was one day away.

"If we had been given a week's notice, we probably could have found it," Mrs. Jones said.

Masked Burn Victims Aided by PR Campaign

VANCOUVER (CP) — A bold motorist intervenes to rescue a woman from a car driven by a masked man.

Police grab a hooded man waiting suspiciously outside a downtown bank.

Proud moments in the unending battle against crime?

Not at all. The alleged kidnapper and the apparent bank robber were only burn victims wearing the masks to help the healing of their painful injuries.

Recognizing the suspicions aroused by the convalescents' costumes, officials at Vancouver General Hospital have started a campaign to educate the public on why people are wearing the masks.

Doctors prescribe the elasticized masks for some burn victims because it has been shown that compression improves healing. The masks are worn daily for up to a year and a half and are only removed during bathing. Persons wearing the masks are given identity cards.

But despite the efforts, many burn victims, already forced by their injuries to make considerable emotional adjustment, have been involved in embarrassing and sometimes dramatic situations.

Trudy Staley, head nurse at the hospital's burn unit, said that in one incident a grain worker badly burned in a fire was driving with his wife when another motorist thought the woman was being kidnapped. The result was an unnecessary rescue attempt.

The same man, who was reluctant to enter banks for fear of the results, was apprehended by police once as he stood waiting for his wife outside. Even when his wife appeared, the police did not believe her explanation.

Another man was interrogated, locked up and prevented from making a telephone call when he tried to board an aircraft as a regular passenger. Airport authorities feared a hijacking attempt.

A campaign poster prepared by the hospital says patients have been arrested and held at gunpoint and "generally caused a commotion amongst law enforcement agencies and in other sectors where the possibility of a hold-up existed."

"We've learned there are ways to prevent this kind of thing from happening," Miss Staley says.

Burn victims are advised to call airports and their banks before they go to those sensitive places.

There is a different problem for children who sometimes have to face teasing from their schoolmates. In those cases, principals of schools are asked to call the children into assemblies to explain why the burn victims are wearing masks.

Nutrition can be fun!

Winning can be fun too!
The B.C. Ministry of Agriculture's Brown Bag Poster Contest has drawn to a close. It was an outstanding success.
The contest was part of the overall Brown Bag nutrition promotion. The idea was to have students in the province from kindergarten to grade twelve design their own posters based on the theme 'Nutrition Can Be Fun', showing the need for sound nutritional eating habits at lunch time.
We received thousands of entries. So many, if we placed them end to end we would have over a mile and a half of posters.
Twenty one regional winners were selected from three age categories. They gathered in Victoria February 11th for an awards presentation hosted by the Honourable Cyril M. Shelford, Minister of Agriculture. Following the awards banquet, the group toured the legislature and other points of interest in the capitol city.
In addition, three grand winners were announced, each receiving a Family Farm Vacation for their families.
We congratulate our winners and thank all students who entered and displayed such imagination and interest. We also thank the teachers of the province for their support of this nutrition program.

Plows Are Ard And Life Hard

COPENHAGEN (Reuter) — Wearing sackcloth feels uncomfortable at first and mud huts tend to be drafty, but such problems do not deter the "Iron Age" villagers of Oejre, 40 kilometres west of Copenhagen.

Danish families come to the historical archeological experimental centre at Lejre to experience the joys of harvesting grain with flint sickles and plowing with an ard — a primitive plowshare.

They dye cloths using vegetables and make Iron Age pottery in primitive kilns in an attempt to re-establish lost links with the past.

Near-extinct animals — Iceland and Faroe Island sheep as well as wild boar — graze in the fields around the huts and are essential to the village economy.

Part of the fun consists in solving the problems that crop up in Iron Age life.

The clay floors disintegrated when they were swept with too hard a brush and the open fires belched smoke into the rooms, but these difficulties were overcome.

The centre at Lejre is open to all — and stays in Iron Age conditions can be arranged. Last year 88,000 visitors came to Lejre, more than one-third of them schoolchildren.

The village was founded in 1965 by Hans Ole Hansen and a group of friends who were determined to create a centre where ancient arts and crafts could be revived and studied before disappearing forever.

How did people live in the Iron Age, 3,000 years ago? What did they eat? How did they cultivate the land?

These, and many other questions fired the imagination of Hansen and his colleagues. Of course, there were orthodox museums which could give some idea of the distant past, but they felt the only way really to find out was to go right back and live as their ancestors did.

With government assistance and a large grant from the Carlsberg Foundation, they built 12 thatched Iron Age-type dwellings in a compound at Lejre. Volunteers from all over Scandinavia built six such houses in the first summer.

By the second summer the village compound was more or less complete. The walls of the houses were made of clay, the roofs of hay.

With 4,000 Devils, It's Helluva Town

By NIKKI FINKE

KAUNAS, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Kaunas is a helluva town. What else can be said about a centuries-old Lithuanian city which houses 4,000 devils, a collection intended to preserve one of the most interesting folklores in this Baltic state.

It all started on June 13, 1906, when a Roman Catholic priest came to the home of Lithuanian painter and collector Antanas Zmuidzinavicius in hopes of persuading the non-believer to begin attending church.

The artist refused, and the frustrated priest gave him a present — a crudely carved wooden sculpture of the smiling face of Satan.

"Then at least you must make friends with the devil," the priest is reported to have said.

Zmuidzinavicius — who already had 22 collections of various types — eagerly started a 23rd by gathering likenesses of the devil from around the world.

By the time of his death at 90 in 1966, the artist had found 260 little Satans in all shapes and sizes.

After the painter's death, the Lithuanian government took control of the collection and put it on display in the tiny A. Zmuidzinavicius Memorial Museum, tucked away on one the city's narrow, cobble-stoned streets. Outside stands a stone sculpture of the devil, smirking at the 2,000 daily visitors.

Kaunas, Lithuania's second-biggest city, located 100 kilometres from the capital of Vilnius, has a population of 370,000.

Lithuanian folklore says the devil was not always an evil person. Quite often he would help the poor and in some fairy tales he is even portrayed as a comic, absurd and pitiable creature.

Many Lithuanians still believe in the old superstition that anyone who collects devils will become the richest, most powerful person — with a little help from Satan.

In medieval times, a Lithuanian courtship rite called for each prospective suitor to wear a handsome devil mask, one of which is proudly displayed in the museum.

One small wooden sculpture shows the devil resting idly at his job. The museum guide, pointing at the figure with a satanic-headed pen, explained that laziness a devilish fault since Satan works only 15 minutes and rests for more than an hour.

Another shows a hairy devil clutching a vodka bottle while a third has a swooning woman in his arms, indicating that Lithuanian Roman Catholics still associate Satan with drunkenness and illicit sex.

Besides gathering devils from around the Soviet Union to expand Zmuidzinavicius' original collection, the museum gets dozen of devils each day in the mail, sent by visitors from around the world who are intrigued with the unusual Kaunas exhibition.

Devil helmets from Africa, devil clocks from Germany and even a souvenir paperweight from Atlantic City, N.J., are displayed.

A Briton sent the Lithuanians a devilish looking little girl with a caption in English that reads: "Good little girls may go to heaven. But bad little girls go everywhere."

There also is a devil woman sent from Japan, and the guide gleefully announces what most male visitors say upon seeing this Medusa-like creature:

"She looks like my mother-in-law!"

Lorne Feels at Home on the Celestial Range

By JOSEPH McLELLAN
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Lorne Greene's first reaction was something like dismay when it began to appear that Battlestar Galactica would become a long-running series. Now, he says, he is beginning to hope that the gadget-rich space epic may develop into "a show that can move people on a spiritual level, an emotional level — even an intellectual level.

"I hope we can do all three," said Greene, the archetypal big daddy of the small screen, during a recent visit to Washington.

He is not nearly as hopeful for the future of the United States — or the world — as he is for the television series which is beginning to make people think of him as Commander Adama the way they used to identify him with Ben Cartwright of the Ponderosa.

"I have children and grandchildren," Greene mused, looking out at the Potomac River from his suite at the Watergate Hotel. "My youngest child, Gillian, is 11, and I wonder what kind of world she will be growing into when she's 25 or 30. I think we will have terrorism in the United States as it has been in the Middle East and in Europe. Will she live under a system of security so tight that everyone will have to be indoors after 7 p.m.? Will she have enough food? People talk about the energy crisis, but the worst future crisis may be in food. Our agricultural technology is 40 or 50 years behind the times. We should be able to grow four or five times as much food per acre as we do. And as the population grows, there will be less and less space to grow food."

A conversation with Greene is a free-wheeling experience, with subjects that range from computers to plate tectonics to international politics ("one world government has to happen") and economics: "Labor costs have gone up in Japan, Taiwan, Korea; the next big pool of cheap labor will be in guess where — the Soviet Union. They have an authoritarian government, there are no strikes, and people work for low wages. Right now, there are approximately 500 multinational companies setting up offices in Russia."

His resonant voice softens and the deep-set eyes under the heavy, dark brows burn with a special intensity when he talks about his friend, Hubert Humphrey, who died a year ago this week:

"Last night we had dinner with Anne Howard, his niece, and she asked me whether there were any politicians now whom I would campaign for the way I did for Hubert. There are some, I'm sure; you'd have to look for them."

His voice shifts into reminiscence: "The day before he died, he phoned around to all his friends, just to say hello — really to say goodbye— and the last thing he asked these people was: "Is there anything I can do for you?". We need more men who will ask that question and really mean it the way he did. I have seen many changes in my life — perhaps more bad than good. One of the bad changes is that we have lost some of the voices of the gentle-hearted.

Greene clearly sees it as part of his role to bring that sort of voice into his television work. This emerges when he talks about his father, who was "the model for about 75 per cent of Ben Cartwright" and about how, with the aid of others, he managed to change Bonanza from a rough-tough Western into a series "that had heart and soul, that dealt with real people in a human way."

In the beginning, Greene recalls, Bonanza was not a very good show — the pilot was not one of the top 10 — but I thought it was a very good concept when they first talked to me about it. They asked me what part I wanted, the older son or the father, and I said the father; I would rather play up than down in terms of age. If I had known it was going to run for 14 years, I would have been even more definite aout that.

"Around the 16th show, I began to get depressed, and I stayed up all night one night writing out my thoughts about it. I read out to the producer what I had written and could see his face going from a smile to something less than a smile. I talked about the concept, the ranch, the people on it and how they behaved, and after that it began to open up. We began to do shows about real people. We stole plots from Shakespeare, who had already stolen them from someone else.

"Sometimes a scene wouldn't work and we'd talk it out and improvise on the same motifs. But then we knew our characters so well that we could do that; we certainly knew them better than the writers.

Greene believes that the same process is now beginning to happen with Battlestar Galactica, but there is a complicating factor because "we have no lead time." An episode of Bonanza would be produced regularly on a six-day schedule, but (partly because special effects take time) Battlestar Galactica sometimes takes almost twice that long — a difficult problem for a weekly series.

According to Greene, the first four or five episodes were "very strong, then three or four were not very good — we didn't like them, either. Originally, it was going to be a three-part miniseries, with one three-hour show and two lasting two hours each. Then it became a series of one-hour shows, and I wasn't sure I liked it — but when you have given your word you stick by it.

"Now, we're at the phase where Bonanza changed; some of us have talked of the producer and found him very open. This is an experiment in many ways, and in an experiment you cannot have a closed mind. People ask why we're having reruns already with such a new show. The answer is that it gave us time to write some more shows with thaught."

The idea of Battlestar Galactica is a microcosm, Green believes, and in that microcosm anything can happen: "You can take any story that has ever been written and adapt it for use in this series." He seemed particularly proud that Fred Astaire will have a role in a forthcoming episode in which the possibility arises that he may be the long-lost father of the orphaned Starbuck.

"We are hearing from the agents of a lot of top actors now, saying that they would be happy to take a role in one of our episodes — and that is a very good sign."

If Greene's mother had had her way, he would not be Commander Adama today, but he might be a concert violinist. "She used to take me to hear people like Elman and Heifetz and I would carry a violin under my arm all the time from the age of 8 to 13," he recalls. "I really tried, for five year — but my heart wasn't in it, and I knew I didn't have the dexterity, the talent." Shortly before he was to give his debut recital, he made what he now calls a "subconscious decision." Chasing a fly ball in a softball game, he saw a rock out of the corner of his eye, stumbled and smashed his left hand on the rock.

"Eighteen stitches, later," he says, "I was out of the violin business."

BEN CARTWRIGHT, Greene's most famous character, was based largely on his own father, he says.

Khomeini Urges Purge of U.S.

TEHRAN (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini urged the Moslem faithful today to purge U.S. and other foreign influence from Iran.

"The nation must be aware that although the people have felt freedom, the roots of American, Soviet, British and Zionist colonialism have not been fully eradicated," the Shiite Moslem leader of the Iranian revolution said in a statement prior to his departure for the holy city of Qom.

Although naming several countries, Khomeini singled out the United States as a corrupting influence and said true independence for Iran can only be achieved with the total eradication of U.S. military, economic and political influence.

"I am afraid to see inclinations to East or West and I hope that everyone will come back to the embrace of Islam and benefit from Islam's rich culture and not be deceived by those quarters who only want to suck the blood of weaker nations," he said.

Meanwhile, the new head of the country's oil industry said that Iran's revolutionary regime will not export oil through the European-U.S. consortium that was the shah's marketing agent but will sell to the individual firms in the combine.

Hassan Nazih told employees at the Tehran headquarters of the National Iranian Oil Co. (NIOC): "The word consortium will, with the help of Allah, be eliminated from Iran's oil vocabulary."

British Petroleum has a 40 per cent interest in the consortium, Exxon has 35 per cent and the rest is held by the U.S. Iricon group, the American Independent Oil Co., Atlantic Richfield, Continental Oil, Getty Oil, Signal Companies, Standard of Ohio, Royal Dutch Shell and French Petroleum.

Future exports are expected to be about 2.4 million barrels daily, but experts predict it will be two months before the industry can produce enough for this.

Kings Predate Nile Pharaohs

CHICAGO (AP) — A University of Chicago researcher says he has found archeological evidence of kings in the Nile Valley several hundred years before the first pharaohs of Egypt.

Bruce Williams of the University's Oriental Institute said Tuesday that if his findings are confirmed they will change considerably scholars' understandings of society and culture in predynastic Egypt.

Williams said he made his find while working with remains of ancient tombs from a cemetery at Qustul near the present-day boundary of Egypt and Sudan, a region known as Lower Nubia.

The cemetery, dating from between 3400 and 3050 B.C., was excavated 15 years ago by Keith Seele, a University of Chicago professor.

Williams said the inhabitants of Nubia at that time were believed to have been loosely organized in tribes or chiefdoms.

"But it now appears that the area had a well-organized political system headed by kings about 200 to 300 years earlier than the first pharoahs," said Williams.

Williams said the most prized artifact is an elaborately carved stone incense burner. Although it had been smashed by cemetery plunderers, "there were lines representing a palace facade, a crowned king sitting on his throne in a boat, a royal sign or standard before him and the falcon god, Horus, above him."

Williams said the name of the king is now known "but the ceremonial object buried with him appears to predate Scorpion, the earliest documented Egyptian ruler, by about three generations."

'Dark Disease' Takes 72nd As Doctors' Strike Nears

Times News Services

NAPLES — A seven-month-old girl today became the 72nd infant to die of Naples' "dark disease" as the city braced for wildcat strikes by pediatricians and paramedics.

More than 100 troops were called up for possible duty in already understaffed hospitals after doctors threatened to strike Thursday and Friday.

Paramedics began a partial strike Monday, but unions threatened major walkouts unless overtime contracts are renegotiated.

Italian health officials assured worried parents that services would continue without disruption at Santobono Hospital, which is caring for most of the babies stricken with the deadly virus that Neapolitans call the "dark disease."

Naples Archbishop Corrado Ursi called a special mass today to pray for the stricken children as the relics of the city's patron saint went on rare display in an effort to calm grief-stricken parents.

Church officials put the relics of St. Januarius on display in the city's main cathedral and asked parents "to pray for help and protection against this terrible disease."

The remains are usually displayed only when church officials believe the city is in danger.

Meanwhile, an epidemiologist at the Centre for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga., said today that the disease is actually two separate, known illnesses.

Dr. William Baine, one of seven consultants called in by Italian authorities to investigate the outbreak of the illness, emphasized that more information still must be analyzed and added that the latest data represents only a progress report.

Baine said the first group of cases occurred from June until December and involved 27 infants, 22 of whom died. He said the cause of death in the majority of those cases was from post infectious encephalopathy, a non-inflammatory brain disorder.

He said many of the ailments appeared to follow immunizations against diphtheria and tetanus or the onset of colds and mild viral illnesses.

"We have no reason to believe, however, that the tetanus and diphtheria vaccines were responsible," said Baine.

He said the second group, in which 37 of 39 infants died, occurred between mid-December 1978 and Feb. 6 of this year.

In the majority of those cases, he said, post mortem data showed the cause of death to be interstitial pneumonia or bronchopneumonia.

Mystery Gas Fumes Send 100 Pupils To Hospital In Cleveland

CLEVELAND (AP) — About 100 pupils at an elementary school were overcome by unidentified gas fumes Tuesday.

The youngsters, who suffered nausea and headaches, were admitted to 10 city hospitals but most were later released.

"They are keeping a few for observation but none is serious," said James Tanner, Cleveland's deputy school superintendent.

The East Ohio Gas Co. said tests at the school showed there was no natural gas leak.

A company spokesman said crews would continue to work with fire department officials to try to identify the source of the fumes.

U.K. Miners Accept 9%

LONDON (AP) — Britain had some good news on the labor front today for a change.

Leaders of the coal miners' union accepted a money offer from the National Coal Board Tuesday evening, easing the threat of a coal strike. It was a big boost for the strike-plagued Labor government of Prime Minister James Callaghan, which is trying to hold wage increases to nine per cent to fight inflation.

Union sources said the Coal Board's £72.5-million ($174-million) offer will give the 258,000 miners estimated raises of nine per cent over basic pay of £78.44 ($188.15) weekly during the next 12 months.

The miners were asking for raises up to 30 per cent but a union negotiator said the difference will be built into overtime and that other premiums will be boosted, especially for increased productivity.

The union chiefs will decide next week whether to hold a general membership vote on their decision, or simply confirm it on their members' behalf.

A ballot might go either way. Leftist opposition to the deal was indicated in the split vote of the union executive, 15 to 10.

A coal miners' strike in 1974 forced British industry into a curtailed work week and brought down the Conservative government of Edward Heath.

Meanwhile, talks with the government broke down on pay demands of 15 to 25 per cent for Britain's 400,000 nurses and midwives.

An estimated 1.5 million public-service workers continued lightning strikes and job slowdowns for more pay. Litter blew about the streets unswept since Christmas and piles of uncollected garbage mounted ever higher.

The country's 17,000 ambulancemen threatened a 24-hour strike Friday over pay. Social Services Secretary David Ennals called it "an act of appalling irresponsibility."

Rhodesian Air Raids Kill 160

JOHANNESBURG, (AP) — Angola said today 160 persons were killed and more than 500 were wounded in Rhodesian air raids Monday against a black nationalist camp in eastern Angola.

Radio Angola said 14 of the dead were civilians. The radio described the target as a refugee camp and school.

Rhodesia said its planes struck a training camp of Joshua Nkomo's guerrilla forces.

Bare Doughty Records: Judge

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A judge has ordered Lee Marvin's agent to open his records on the career of Richard Doughty, a young actor who says he was sexually involved with Michelle Triola Marvin while she lived with the movie star.

However, Superior Court Judge Arthur Marshall, responding to a motion by Miss Marvin's lawyer, said he will not allow the records to be scrutinized until the rebuttal portion of the trial.

Marvin Mitchelson, representing Miss Marvin, has said he will attempt to re-examine Doughty's story when he rebuts the defence case currently being presented.

Doughty has testified he had sex with Miss Marvin more than 25 times while she lived with the actor.

At the close of Tuesday's session, Mitchelson was unable to win the judge's permission to use the records on Doughty in his cross examination of Marvin's agent, Meyer Mishkin. Mishkin also represents Doughty.

"You may do that on rebuttal, counsel," the judge said.

Meanwhile, in an unexpected development, the judge announced the trial would be in recess today while he handles another case — postponing Mishkin's cross examination until Thursday.

The agent, who has represented Marvin since 1949, testified at length about the Hollywood star system and Marvin's rise from a featured player to a big name with the help of an Academy Award for the movie Cat Ballou.

Mishkin told of the salaries Marvin was paid for various movies, ranging from $25,000 in the early 1960s to $1 million each for the movies, Paint Your Wagon and Monte Walsh in 1968 and 1969.

"Did you ever ask the plaintiff, Michelle Marvin, to recommend any script involved in any of these pictures?" asked Marvin's lawyer Berndt Lohr-Schmidt.

"No," Mishkin said firmly.

With Mishkin's testimony, the defence sought to counter Miss Marvin's claim that she gave up her own career to be Marvin's companion, helpmate and adviser. Her lawsuit contends she sometimes helped him in his work.

Miss Marvin, 46, a former showgirl, is seeking $1.8 million — an estimated half of the 55-year-old actor's assets during the six years they lived together.

Saudi Armed Forces Put on Alert

JIDDA (AP) — Saudi Arabia put its armed forces on the alert today, cancelling all military leave and ordering all officers and men to their barracks immediately "because of prevailing circumstances."

The announcement broadcast by Riyadh Radio did not elaborate. But observers believe it was the result of a border war in the southwest corner of the Arabian Peninsula between pro-Saudi Northern Yemen and Marxist South Yemen, which has a large number of East Bloc advisers in the Aden area by the entrance to the Red Sea.

The border clashes continued during the last decade. South Yemen said Monday that it has captured the three North Yemeni towns on the border — Harib, Qatabah and El Beida.

Kuwait's foreign minister, Sheik Sabah al-Ahmed al-Jaber al-Sabah, flew to Riyadh, the Saudi capital, today to talk about the latest Yemeni developments, the Kuwaiti news agency said.

Saudi Arabia called Tuesday for an immediate ceasefire between the Yemens Tuesday. A government statement said the fighting threatens to spread beyond the borders of the two combatants "and perhaps even beyond the borders of the whole Arab nation."

The two Yemens have been accusing each other of starting the latest fighting, a frequent development between the two neighbors today amid claims in Aden of the outbreak of all-out rebellion against the North Yemeni government in San'a. There was no independent confirmation of the claims.

South Yemen's government-controlled Aden Radio said numerous tribes, from all over the 200,000-square-kilometre territory of North Yemen, "joined the revolution and declared their support for the struggle against the San'a regime."

Saudi Foreign Minister Prince Saud said the Arab League should meet as soon as possible to consider the situation. North Yemen also called for an urgent meeting of the league, and South Yemen said it is willing to attend. Reports from Cairo, the league's headquarters, said the league will send an investigating committee to the border area.

The two Yemens consider themselves one nation, split by the British colonial occupation of the South.

They have been trying to unite since the South gained independence in 1967.

Blaze Kills 14 As Shutters Stop Firemen

MANILA (AP) — Thirteen women and a 10-month-old baby burned to death in a supermarket blaze because firemen couldn't get through the building's steel shutters that were padlocked from the outside, Philippines ipolice said today.

Cpl. Tirso Abrigo of the Olongapo police force said rescuers could not reach the screaming women because the steel shutters of the building's ground floor were padlocked from the outside.

Fuel-Oil Squeeze In Parts of U.S.

United Press International

From snowbound New England to sunny Florida, homeowners and massive electric utilities alike are reporting scattered fuel oil shortages and headache-strength price increases.

The heating oil shortage is so severe in Maine that Gov. Joseph Brennan Tuesday signed a deal with the Pentagon, borrowing 2.3 million gallons from stockpiles at Loring Air Force Base.

President Carter doesn't have to worry about Potomac Electric and Power Co. getting enough fuel oil to run the White House electricity, but spot home heating oil shortages are reported in some New England states.

Connecticut officials describe the home heating situation as "very tight," but not a serious threat. In Vermont, fuel oil dealers came up shorthanded and some homeowners had to seek allotments from a special state "set-aside" program.

In Florida, the municipally owned Jacksonville Electric Authority, which depends exclusively on fuel oil, reported only enough reserves to supply its 290,000 customers needs for 11 days instead of the usual 30-day supply.

The major culprits in the current fuel oil shortage are the international cutbacks in production, principally in Iran, and the cold weather. But even with Tuesday's announcement that Iranian oil exports will resume March 5, prices will be substantially higher.

Iranian bids are expected to go as high as $20 a barrel, nearly 50 percent higher than rates set by OPEC. Venezuela announced increases of up to 18 percent Monday and Kuwait, a 9.35 percent hike Tuesday.

In fact, officials in many states aren't so worried about shortages as the bills.

"The only difficulty we have is when we get the bill," observed Augie Wallmeyer of Virginia Electric and Power Co., which serves 75 per cent of the state.

A Boston Edison Co. spokesman predicted the Venezuelan hike would mean higher utility prices as early as April or May, while heating oil prices are expected to rise to 60 cents per gallon — a 25 percent increase over the past year — before the heating season is over.

X-Ray Hazard Termed Serious

WASHINGTON (WP) — Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano Jr. Tuesday placed the issue of low-level nuclear radiation hazards high on the list of American public health priorities.

He called for expanding governmental studies to determine the dangers of exposure to a phenomenon he described as a "serious public health issue."

Califano voiced his concerns in releasing the 800-page draft working papers of the White House Interagency task force on the health effects of ionizing radiation, which has been examining for nine months the controversy over existing levels of radiation that are considered safe.

Califano said recent studies, though not conclusive, do suggest the incidence of leukemia produced by low levels of radiation may be higher than scientists thought.

The task force reviewed past and current research into radiation health and concluded: "existing knowledge is insufficient to provide an unequivocal answer to the low-dose question." Moreover, it said a definitive answer may never be found.

Nonetheless, the task force and Califano recommended current health research be increased and coordinated.

A key element of the current radiation controversy is whether dose standards in government nuclear facilities and privately run nuclear power plants pose long-term health risks for employees.

'Protest Of The Ignorant'

AALESUND, Norway (CP) — The owner of a seal-hunting ship occupied briefly by about 20 members of the environmental group Greenpeace Foundation said today the protest leaders did not understand what they were demonstrating against.

The protesters jumped aboard the Veslemari on Tuesday and some chained themselves to masts.

Police cut the chains off most of the protestors and arrested them.

"The crew told me later the four were quiet and likeable people, but from their point of view they did not really understand what they were demonstrating against," ship owner Aage Aarseth told an Oslo newspaper.

Bid Abandoned

BONN (Reuter) — West Germany said Tuesday it has abandoned an attempt to persuade some Soviet bloc countries to hand over documents on Nazi war crimes committed on their territory.

Thousands Pay Final Respects to Bennett

Thousands of British Columbians ranging from ordinary citizens to politicians paid their last respects Tuesday to W.A.C. Bennett.

They gathered under sunny, clear blue skies in Victoria, Vancouver and in the former premier's home town of Kelowna for services for Bennett, who died Friday at age 78.

Among those attending the multi-denominational Victoria service in Metropolitan United Church, brightly decorated with three large bouquets of spring flowers, were Gov.-Gen. Edward Schreyer and Mrs. Schreyer, Lt.-Gov. Henry Bell-Irving and Mrs. Bell-Irving, legislative Speaker Harvey Schroeder, Victoria Conservative MP Allan McKinnon and Tom Wells, Ontario intergovernmental affairs minister.

Representing the provincial government were Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis, Health Minister Bob McClelland and Deregulations Minister Sam Bawlf.

Social Credit MLAs included Lyle Kahl of Equimalt and Ed Smith of North Peace River, and the government's opposition was represented by Graham Lea (NDP-Prince Rupert), Charles Barber (NDP-Victoria) and Conservative Leader Vic Stephens.

Also attending were former transport minister Bob Strachan who was opposition leader for 13 years, Mrs. Shirley Barrett, wife of NDP leader Dave Barrett, former Conservative leader Scott Wallace and former Liberal leader David Anderson.

Dave Barrett and Bill King (NDP-Revelstoke-Slocan) attended the Vancouver service.

In his eulogy, former lands, forests and water resources minister Ray Williston described Bennett as one of the most competent administrators of public finance yet to serve in Canada.

Williston expressed the "deep appreciation of the people of B.C. for the wide-ranging, imaginative public service and leadership performed for them by a truly great Canadian."

"He believed that you must first earn a dollar before you spent it on services. He insisted you should always have something put away to cover an unexpected condition," said Williston, a minister in Bennett cabinets for 18 years.

"Financial accountability became the foundation on which his successful administration was based."

Bennett, who became premier in 1952, was defeated by the NDP in 1972.

"He gloried in the historic association with the Crown and used every excuse to remind our people of their heritage. This province must have set a record for celebrating centennials during his administration."

Williston also said it is not a time for sorrow but must be an occasion for rejoicing "that divine providence allowed this remarkable man to serve as our leader of government for so many fruitful years."

Conducting the services were Rev. A. E. King, Rev. Alfred Johnson, Rev. Laura Butler, Rt. Rev. R. F. Gartrell, Anglican bishop of B.C., and Most Rev. Remi de Roo, Roman Catholic bishop of Victoria.

In Kelowna, silent weeping, expressions of gratitude and respect, and warm reminiscences were part of an emotional tribute Tuesday to the former premier.

About 1,000 mourners — including his 81-year-old wife May, 24 family members, friends, associates and townspeople — crowded into First United Church for the afternoon funeral service in the Okanagan community.

Several hundred others lined the streets outside to pay their final respects to the local man who shaped the politics and economy as the province's premier from 1952 to 1972.

Many couldn't contain their grief and wept openly as the coffin, draped with the sun-emblazoned provincial flag that Bennett introduced, was led from the church by two bagpipers, playing Amazing Grace, and an honor guard of six RCMP officers from the Kelowna detachment.

In a eulogy to Bennett, provincial Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy called him a man of principle, strength, vision, enthusiasm and energy.

The man, she said, would be remembered as a builder who sought a better standard of living for the province's citizens and as a person for the people who led the provincial Social Credit party as a party for the people.

Rev. Dr. Clyde Woollard, who conducted the service, described Bennett as a man with a true heart as "faithful as the tides."

He said he had room in his heart for "everybody and everybody's joy," a characteristic that set him apart from other men.

A family spokesman said Bennett's family, including son Premier Bill Bennett, is intensely private and did not want a full state funeral, but agreed to it after public response to his death.

Liberal Senator Ray Perrault, Nova Scotia Conservative MP Elmer McKay, and several former and present provincial cabinet ministers were present at the 45-minute service.

Also attending were representatives of foreign governments, the Canadian Armed Forces and local church leaders.

Pt. Hardy Walkout Ends

Employees at Utah Mines Ltd.'s operation in Port Hardy returned to work today after a three-day walkout.

About 700 workers were affected by the action which apparantly stemmed from an employee's charge of racial discrimination against a foreman.

The men walked off the job at 6 p.m. Thursday and returned at midnight Tuesday following two days of meetings in Vancouver between the operating engineers' union, the company and representatives of the Labor Relations Board.

The parties signed a memorandum of agreement Tuesday stating the workers would return to work and then another meeting would take place today in Port Hardy between the company, the employees in the company department involved and the LRB.

'No Holds Barred'

Victoria NDP MLA Charles Barber says his fifth public accountability session in the Fairfield area tonight will be a no-holds-barred affair.

Providing some political contrast in the meeting will be businessman Bud Mesher, president of the Socred Saanich-The Islands Constituency Association.

Mesher will chair the session and Barber says this indicates it is "open to anyone, regardless of party. It should be an exciting evening."

The meeting at St. Matthias Church, Richmond and Richardson, starts at 7:30.

Door Smashed 'Just for Kicks'

A 20-year-old has been charged with mischief after the front door of Burt's Restaurant in Trounce Alley was smashed early today.

Police said someone passing by smashed the door "just for kicks."

The suspect was arrested a few blocks away at 3:30 a.m.

The incident was the second this week involving vandalism in downtown Victoria. On Monday vandals caused several thousand dollars damage uprooting plants at 747 Fort and damaging doors, desks and a safe in an office building at 734 Broughton.

Police do not believe the incidents are related.

Six Break-Ins In Same Block

Esquimalt police are investigating six house break-ins in the 500-block Lampson Tuesday night.

A spokesman said in each case doors were kicked in and rooms ransacked while the occupants were away.

The break-ins occurred between 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m.

Police are still attempting to determine what was taken as some of the occupants are away on holidays.

Officers believe the thieves were looking primarily for money. A small transistor radio taken from one house was found discarded outside another house down the block.

Community-Time Boost Ordered

Victoria radio station CFMS-FM has been ordered by the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission to make more commercial-free time available to community groups.

The commission approved renewal of the station's broadcasting licence for five years, provided community air time is increased from a minimum 15 minutes to 30 minutes a week in line with standard CRTC policy for licensees in that category.

CFMS should publicize the fact that community time is available and promote access to it, the commission said.

Application by CFMS to increase the number of times a week that a musical selection may be repeated was denied, in accordance with CRTC policy that radio music is of limited scope and repetitive.

Also granted a five-year renewal was CHEK-TV Ltd. for its Victoria, Sooke, Jordan River and Port Alberni transmitters but on condition the station remain a CBC affiliate until CBUVT Victoria starts broadcasting on a full-time basis. The station was previously granted permission to switch its network affiliation to CTV when the CBC opens its Victoria facilities.

The licence also requires that island service through local productions be maintained at 25 hours a week after the change in affiliation.

City Businessman Given Jail Term

The B.C. Court of Appeal Tuesday imposed a jail term of two years less a day on a 35-year-old Victoria businessman who was earlier given a suspended sentence on fraud charges.

Gordon Bruce Barlow, who operated Works West and Design Research while working as a building designer, pleaded guilty Jan. 16 to two counts of fraud and two counts of false pretence involving worthless cheques totalling $35,775.

He was given a suspended sentence Feb. 6 by county court Judge Leslie Cashman and placed on probation for three years with conditions.

The Crown appealed the sentence on the grounds it was inadequate and inappropriate considering the circumstances and the criminal record of Barlow.

Crown counsel Peter Birkett said a more appropriate sentence would have been a penitentiary term — two years or more. He argued that Barlow's rehabilitation must take a back seat to deterrence of him and others and of punishment and of the public interest.

But defence counsel David Wilson said jail hadn't worked in the past and the public was best served and protected by his rehabilitation. He urged the court not to allow a penitentiary to be a safe haven for Barlow.

Mr. Justice J.D. Taggart, delivering the unanimous decision of himself and Justices E.E. Hinkson and J.D. Lambert, described Barlow as intelligent and capable of earning a substantial income by honest means.

His problem was his inability to function on his own as a principal of a business instead of an employee.

It also appeared he cannot withstand stress and when stress overcomes him, he resorts to grandiose spending, usually through theft and fraud.

Taggart commended Judge Cashman on his innovative approach in giving a suspended sentence and probation because too often one saw an offender returned time and again to jail without thought as to rehabilitation.

But one also had to have regard for the broad public interest, he said, and the public interest in a case like this, especially considering Barlow's criminal record, necessitated a jail sentence.

However, the conflicting demands of Barlow's rehabilitation and the interests of the public can be met by a jail sentence to be served in a provincial institution rather than a federal penitentiary, he said.

Barlow also will be on probation for three years after completing his jail term with the same conditions as before.

One of the conditions is a prohibition on him being a principal or manager of any firm.

Barlow's criminal record includes 16 false pretences, four matters related to forged documents, three thefts, and uttering, forgery and fraud.

Taxes Force Sale Of Famed Island

INVERARAY, Scotland (Reuter) — The island of Iona, the cradle of Scottish Christianity, is for sale, its owners said Tuesday.

Iona, with its famous abbey is the island where St. Columba landed from Ireland in the 6th century and from which monks went out to convert the Picts and Scots.

The tiny island off southwest Scotland has for many centuries been the property of the Dukes of Argyll. But now the trustees of the 10th duke, who died in 1949, have decided "with the utmost reluctance" that it must be sold in order to pay death duties.

The trustees declined to comment on reports they are asking $2.4 million for the island.

'Green Wall' to Reclaim Desert

By BRIAN CATHCART

LONDON (Reuter) — A woman who went to North Africa 20 years ago with little more than a bucket, a spade and an idea now has launched one of the most ambitious desert reclamation schemes the Sahara has ever seen.

Her name is Wendy Campbell-Purdie and her idea is that the growth of the desert, which destroys 250,000 acres of farming land every year, could be halted by a barrier of trees.

In November, with the help of veterans of the Battle of El Alamein, she will plant the first trees of a wall which she hopes will one day stretch along the northern edge of the desert from the Nile River to the Atlantic Ocean.

The desert moves as winds and rain break up the soil. It eats up precious arable land, silts up wells and forces whole communities to migrate.

The United Nations calculated in 1977 that a total of 630 million people worldwide were in danger of losing their land through it turning to a desert.

Miss Campbell-Purdie, a 54-year-old New Zealander, has proved that trees and shrubs can bind the soil, end erosion and even make land more fertile.

She first became interested in forestry in the 1950s, when she worked for a timber firm in Corisca. She went from there to Morocco, and then to Algeria, where she persuaded the government to give her a patch of land to test her theory.

With the help of local people she planted more than 100,000 trees in a belt one kilometre wide and irrigated them with waste water from a nearby abbatoir.

Five years later, the forest was thriving and tree roots had reached deep enough to find water.

Between the rows of trees, shrubs and grass were growing, and in their shelter, fruit trees and cereal crops had been raised.

It was not the work of Wendy Campbell-Purdie alone. She had been helped by charities in England and the Algerian government.

A year ago she made contact with the organizers of a quite different North African scheme, the International El Alamein Reunion.

They were making preparations to bring together more than 2,000 veterans from 10 countries on the site in northern Egypt of the desert battle of 1942.

They saw in Miss Campbell-Purdie's ideas an opportunity to raise a lasting memorial to their comrades who died in the battle.

So when the soldiers from both Allied and Axis countries assemble on the battlefield in November they will plant a "forest of peace."

'The Protectors' Save Art

Written for CP
By NORMAN CRIBBENS

LIVERPOOL, England (CP) — A piece of the ancient Greek temple Parthenon, delivered here by ship from Athens, could help save the world's greatest art treasures.

It has been sent to preservation experts in Liverpool by Greek archaeologists who are desperate to save the 2,400-year-old Parthenon from destruction by pollution.

The restoration will be tackled by the British firm of Balvac in Kirkby, Liverpool, which is famous for saving the world's architectural showpieces.

Already Balvac's experts have saved doomed statues in the Porta Della Carta of Venice and are working on statues in Rome which are being eaten away by traffic pollution. Their work in preserving monumental stone works in Britain, including St. Andrew at St. Paul's Cathedral in London, has earned them a special title among historians — The Protectors.

"Most of the danger to historic architecture has occurred during the last 50 years," says Roger France, who leads a team of experts at Balvac. "The main causes are exhaust fumes from vehicles and industrial waste."

Balvac is a subsidiary of the Balfour Beatty Construction Co. of Edinburgh. It joined the preservation battle as the result of an invention in 1972 by James Milne, one of the firm's engineers.

"We impregnate the threatened stone with silicone to a depth of one or two inches," Milne says. "The silicone is sucked into the stone by means of a vacuum created round the stone in a polythene bag. This effectively seals the stone."

Balvac so far has used its ultra-modern techniques to protect such treasures of Britain's past as the 119-year-old Genius of Architecture statue in Princes Park, Edinburgh, Scotland, and the majestic Lady Jerningham statue at Berwick-on-Tweed.

Use of Guns by Criminala Rising Sharply in Britain

MANCHESTER, England (CP) — The Police Federation reports a sharp increase in the use of firearms by criminals in Britain since the abolition of the death penalty in 1948.

"There is now little difference in the penalties faced by the criminal who kills in the course of a robbery and the criminal who does not kill but uses a firearm," says the federation in its magazine Police.

It says Parliament has created a climate in which the criminal use of fire-arms has accelerated. Referring to recent cases in which police shot two suspects dead, the magazine says:

"This has led to suggestions that the police are being armed by the back door: In fact the police have been completely open about the growth of firearms in the service. This applies to equipment, training and the number of occasions on which firearms have been carried.

The Police Federation says thousands of British policemen now have been trained to use weapons.

Most players shun artificial bidding conventions and are quite happy to settle for Blackwood and one or two other gadgets that appeal to them. There is much to be said for this natural style of bidding. Probably most readers of this column have detected here an implicit endorsement of the more natural methods of bidding.

But this general philosophy can be carried too far, because there are some artificial conventions that can be profitably adopted without interfering with natural bidding.

One such convention is the grand slam force. basically, this artificial convention addresses itself to the case where a player feels there is a good chance for a grand slam, provided there is no loser in the trump suit itself.

Take this case where North would happily go all the way if he knew that partner's hearts were headed by at least the K-Q. He elicits this information by leaping to five notrump, a highly specialized bid that commands partner to bid seven hearts with two of the three top heart honors.

In bidding five notrump, North implies that hearts — the last-named suit — are trumps and directs South's attention to his heart holding and nothing else. South has no choice but to bid seven hearts, which is easily made.

The grand slam force is seldom used — because grand slam hands are seldom dealt. But when the occasion arises and the solidity of the trump suit is in question, the convention can be invoked by either player to learn the combined high-card trump holding.

One word of caution should be added. Extreme care must be exercised not to confuse this convention with the Blackwood five notrump bid that asks for kings. The Blackwood five notrump bid for kings is always preceded by a four notrump bid for aces.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Emphasis on bringing ambitions into focus. One who made promises could be "financially embarrassed." Know it and have alternatives at hand. Check associations, organizations for possible promotional tie-ins co-operative advertising-publicity programs.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Money, authority, power and love could be part of your scenario. Accent on bridging distance, language gaps. What might have appeared the opposite of practical does a reverse spin. Capricorn, Cancer — and the number 8 — figure prominently.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Refuse to be intimidated bv those who claim to "know a secret." Rely on your own sources. Une close to you has been saving for proverbial rainy day. You will get needed support. A past effort, favor could now pay dividends. Aries, Libra individuals could play key roles.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 Oct. 22): Emphasize public relations, special reports, legal affairs. Once close to you — partner or spouse — aids in getting project underway. Areas previously dark receive benefit of greater illumination. You can afford now to judge, select, to be cautious, to play waiting game.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You make financial gain — hunch pays dividends. One who taught you may now come to you for counsel. Be generous — repay favors. Adhere to Golden Rule. Leo, Cancer, Aquarius individuals figure in scenario.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your natural capabilities surge to forefront. Highlight communication, language. Give full rein to intellectual curiosity. Ask and answer questions. Expand horizons. Be flexible. Refuse to be painted into corner.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Spotlight on property value, security, basic material — and moral — values. Cancer individual figures prominently. Another Capricorn could share benefit of experience. Obstacle can be transformed into stepping-stone towards progress.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Spotlight on messages, calls, special reports, restless relatives, significant changes, intensified relationship. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. By taking notes, you could discover "missing link."

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): Accent on settling financial dispute, harmonizing family relationships, exercising understanding, diplomacy. Be kind, not weak. Count your change — and your blessings. Protect possessions, but don't be possessed by them.

IF MARCH 1st IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are sensitive, independent, sensual, original, a pioneer. Some are shocked by your views, others are inspired. You are perceptive, dramatic, dynamic and you can sense when something of importance is to occur. Leo, Aquarius individuals figure in your life scenario. May could be your most significant month of 1979, a year of travel, opportunity, social life accelerated — chances for expanding horizons, for communication, publication. Before March is finished you make major domestic adjustment. Before the year is finished, you make decisions which bring a scattering of forces — or a joining with persons in manner to bring happiness. You succeed or fail based on ability to put pride in perspective, on your ability to be versatile, alert, alive without spreading efforts too thin. The year can be beautiful because you will have choices.

HOW TO WRITE

CLASSIFIED ACTION

AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader or prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

309 IN MEMORIAM

BUGG — In memory of a loving son Robert Jr., who passed away Feb. 28, 1975.
To hear his voice, to see his smile,
To sit and talk to him awhile.
To be together in the same old way
Would be our dearest wish today.
Dear Lord, forgive a silent tear
A constant wish that he were here.
Others are taken, yes we know
But he was ours, and we loved him so.
—Always remembered by Mom, Dad, Helen and Roger.

JACOB - In loving memory of James, who passed away Feb. 28, 1978.
The face I loved is now laid low,
His loving voice is still,
The hand so often clasped in mine,
Lies now in death's cold chill.
I often sit and think of him
When I am all alone;
For memory is the only thing
That grief can call its own.
Wife Gladys and son Michael.

IN LOVING MEMORY OF MRS. Les Notter who passed away Feb. 28, 1974. Sadly missed by her loving sister Jean Fletcher.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUTE, SANDS

Beware of Late Frost

GARDENING
hilda beastall

Every warm spell now tempts the home gardener to immediate action outdoors, especially to sow vegetable seeds.

Sandy warm soils on sloping ground can indeed receive sowings of the hardier vegetables at this time, but the rest of us usually devise ways on raising a few seedlings under protection. They will be ready to put into our heavier soil when the soil becomes warmer and a little dryer.

There is also late frost to consider, so that only the known hardy early types of vegetables can be sown.

First we must be realistic as to space for raising the plants. With a greenhouse, even unheated, conditions are excellent because of the overhead and all-round light, and the bench space for flats and boxes of soil where moisture can be controlled. Without heat, other from sun's warmth, the next important point is enough air by ventilation every day.

In the dwelling house, we make do with window sills, and perhaps in a porch, unheated, with all-round light. When plants are well established we are faced with taking them outdoors every mild sunny or rainy day to strengthen the plant stems.

This method repays us with sturdy pea, lettuce, cauliflower and spinach plants first and later with scarlet runner, soy bean, tomato and squash plants to go out in early June.

No attempt is made to start the whole season's supply of peas, for instance, only the few to give the first delicious pickings while the earliest of the outdoor sowing is making growth and preparing to flower.

The shallow plastic or foil trays which come with some foods would seem a good base for standing under whatever small containers of seed may be used. Each small size evaporated milk can is suitable for holding 10 small seeds to germinate, or one pea or bean seedling until planting outdoors.

Varieties for these early sowings indoors suggested as worth trying are: cauliflower — Early Snowball, needs constant moisture at root level while growing to prevent bolting; spinach — King of Denmark, New Zealand — the latter likes a cool rich soil to germinate, then warmth for growing, takes only young shoots at each picking; Scarlet Runner beans (don't sow until the end of April); Blue Coco runners have blue flowers and purple shaded pods which turn green when cooked; Pea bean is not a cross, it is listed in a 1962 book as a climber. The seed is a clearly marked white and dark brown. Pods are eaten when young, mature beans can be dried for winter use. This plant makes a good combination cropper for small gardens.

The pea to sow now to get an early start is Laxton's Progress. Sow two to a small can, removing the weaker after germination.

Soybeans of an eary variety such as Early green Bush, Manschurian, Fiskeby V or a locally grown fine unnamed variety will give an early crop here especially when started indoors but not before April 21 for they must have settled warm weather before going into garden soil near the end of May. Glass cloches are ideal for starting this crop right out in the garden.

These indoor beginnings are small gambles for impatient home gardeners; they often repay us with enviable early returns.

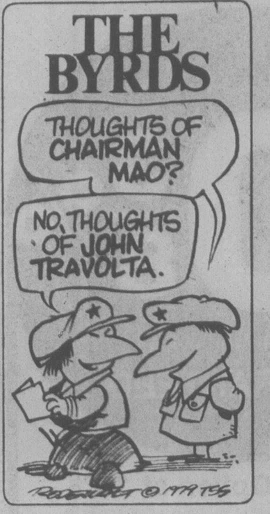
War May Spread Soviets Warn



Times News Services

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union, demanding an immediate Chinese withdrawal from Vietnam, today warned for the first time that the fighting in Indochina may spread.

At the same time in Peking, U.S. Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal, acting as President Carter's personal emissary, renewed American pressure on China to pull its troops out of Vietnam.

In a 75-minute meeting with Premier Hua Kuo-feng, Blumenthal said he repeated the U.S. position he first delivered on Tuesday to Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping.

In a sober but bitter news commentary today, Pravda said that China has spurned the "voice of reason" and embarked on a bloodletting campaign in Vietnam that threatens to spread unless it is stopped immediately.

The 2,000-word commentary carried by the Tass news agency was written for the Communist Party newspaper by Igor Alexandrov — a name viewed as a pseudonym for top party leaders that reflects the thinking at the highest levels of the Soviet Union.

The commentary repeatedly blamed the West for encouraging China and warned the war between China and Vietnam may spread. "Those who today hope to warm themselves by its flames rashly risk being the next victim of the aggressor and his adventuristic policy," it said.

It also singled out the United States, saying, "The ambivalent stand taken by the U.S. ruling circles in the face of the Chinese leadership's open threats against Vietnam has, as a matter of fact, contributed to Peking's openly taking the warpath."

The article appeared to be a definitive statement on the Soviet attitude toward the Chinese invasion and seemed to lay the groundwork for whatever steps the Kremlin might take against Peking. The Soviet Union already has officially warned China to get out of Vietnam "before its too late."

A public announcement of any change in Soviet policy is likely to come Friday when President Leonid Brezhnev is scheduled to make a nationally televised address on the eve of elections to the Soviet parliament.

Despite denials from Washington about a connection between the Chinese of-

No Plates? $250 Fine

Midnight tonight is the deadline for motorists to attach new licence plates, and it may prove costly for the forgetful few. (See lineup picture on page 31).

Police will check vehicles after 12:01 a.m. Thursday.

Owners of vehicles parked on the street will be fined $35 if no plate is showing; $15 if the owner had bought plates but didn't put them on.

For persons caught driving vehicles without plates there is an automatic $250 fine for not having insurance, plus $35. If the plates are in the vehicle the fine is cut to $15.

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will borrow about 1.5 billion Swiss francs worth $900 million U.S. to support the dollar, Finance Minister Jean Chretien disclosed Tuesday.

The minister said negotiations for the Swiss francs from the major Swiss banks were well advanced. Chretien announced two weeks ago the government's intention of seeking financing in Switzerland to support the dollar on international currency markets.

Firebomb No. 15

VANCOUVER (CP) — Firebombers hit another downtown bank early this morning, bringing to 15 the number of Molotov cocktail throwing incidents in the last 10 weeks.

Police said a branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce at 14th St. and Main was attacked at about 3:20 a.m. There was a "fair" amount of damage.

Embezzlement, Kickback Probe Demanded by MP

Times News Services

OTTAWA — An investigation by auditor-general James MacDonnell into the possibility of mishandling of public funds by officials of the prestigious Canadian Council of Christians and Jews (CCCJ) was demanded in the Commons Tuesday.

Conservative MP Tom Cossitt, who raised the issue, also wants an investigation of "crooks" in the public service, a reference to alleged use of government computers by private firms.

Cossitt told the Commons he wants MacDonell to investigate "disposition of funds including a reported 4.5 per cent interest $57,000 mortgage and a $9,000 interest free loan to Peter Jones, president of the CCCJ."

Ottawa television broadcaster and local CCCJ board director Max Keeping said "there may be real and mass embezzlement in the organization."

Keeping along with half a dozen members of the local board of directors resigned in the last week.

Cossitt told reporters that government employees have received kickbacks to increase government grants to the CCCJ to $767,000 from $61,000 during the last four years.

He also claimed a number of "prominent Canadians" have resigned from the council because they could not get straight answers about how government grants were spent.

Cossitt refused to elaborate on his charges outside the House — where he is not given immunity from libel suits — but said he would provide further details in the House shortly.

In the reference to crooks, he said in the Commons that a private computer data firm gave one Unemployment Insurance Commission employee a swimming pool in return for use of a government computer after working hours.

The company attempted to compromise other public servants by sending them $20 bills in plain envelopes, Cossitt claimed.

He said an RCMP investigation into the matter is complete, but the government has refused to make public its findings.

"Are they going to keep hiding crooks in the public service and not let the people of Canada know that their money is being embezzled?"

He said in an interview the government is anxious to keep this "pretty smelly business" quiet because some of the UIC employees involved in the alleged embezzlement in 1977 now hold high positions in the government.

Some of the public servants who allegedly allowed the private firm to use the UIC computer were trans-

Angry Inventor Shuts Mill

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

A 68-year-old Ladysmith man has closed down MacMillan Bloedel's sawmill in Chemainus in an effort to get royalties on a chipper knife he invented which he says the company is using.

George Standal, a retired millworker, first set up his one-man picket line Tuesday and about 90 millworkers on the afternoon shift refused to go to work.

He returned this morning and a company spokesman said about 150 dayshift employees also refused to cross his picket line.

The sawmill remained shut down and only the planer mill was operating.

The MacBlo spokesman said the company is seeking a court injunction to prevent the picketing.

A spokesman for the International Woodworkers of America said the union backs Standal because "he's getting the short end of the stick."

He said the union is going to meet with Standal and try to arrange for a lawyer to help him win his case.

Standal said in an interview today the mill uses a special chipper head and knives which he invented in 1962 and on which he holds patents.

He said the equipment was originally manufactured by a Portland, Ore. company from which he received "about a third of a million dollars" in royalties.

However, that company was bought out by Mainland Elworthy Division of Bow Valley Resource Services Ltd. of Vancouver and then, Standal said, the royalties stopped.

He has tried for a number of years to get the company to begin paying royalties on the chipper knives which are used by a number of large sawmill companies in Canada, the U.S. and other countries.

At one time he said he offered to take a flat sum of $200,000 for the patents but Mainland Elworthy gave him "the run around."

Mainland Elworthy vice-president Mike Parent said in an interview today the company feels Standal is acting irresponsibly.

However, he said he feels sorry for the man.

Parent said the company's position, based on legal advice, is that it has no obligation to Standal.

He said the kind of equipment used in the Chemainus mill is designed and manu-

Liberal, Tory MPs Squelch Prices Board

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Liberal and Conservative MPs overwhemingly rejected a New Democratic proposal to set up a Fair Prices Commission equipped with the powers to roll back unjustified price increases.

A handful of 16 New Democrats and Social Credit members voted in favor but 200 Liberals and Conservatives rejected the proposal introduced in the House of Commons Tuesday by NDP leader Ed Broadbent.

However, Consumer Affairs Minister Warren Allmand said he is "fed up" with rising prices and will bring in legislation soon to restore the competition needed to get prices under control.

Allmand told the Commons during debate on the NDP motion that the government will soon reintroduce its long-promised competition bill.

"I am fed up and Canadian consumers are fed up with the unending increases in prices," Allmand told the Commons.

He said companies are able to raise prices because there isn't enough competition in the marketplace.

Allmand said he will bring in amendments to the Combines Investigation Act — aimed at putting stricter regulations on corporate mergers and monopolies — to improve conpetition.

Broadbent challenged the federal government to "show some moral leadership" and set up a prices commission.

Economic Development Minister Robert Andras rejected Broadbent's demands, arguing the commission would not solve the "basic problem of inflation."

"It's time some economic justice went in the direction of Canadian workers," Broadbent told the House.

"We see a special commission zeroing in on particular prices, particular cases where profits are too high. This selective approach will have the effect of deterring others," the NDP leader said.

Andras maintained that "the motion by the NDP does not address the basic problem of inflation.

"He (Broadbent) conveniently ignores the study by

TRIBES REGAIN OLD TREASURE

Valuable Indian artifacts confiscated over 50 years ago will be returned by the federal government to the two tribes which originally owned them.

The provincial museum has provided temporary storage space for the artifICts.

The artifacts were seized in 1922 and 1923 after Indian potlatch ceremonies were outlawed.

Potlatches were banned mainly on the grounds that they impoverished Indian families, though some Indians claim the real motive was to destroy their culture.

Ray Hall, a spokesman for the Indian affairs department, said Tuesday many of the items disappeared and some found their way into a private collection now in New York.

"The value of the 338 artifacts awaiting to be returned to the Indian bands who once owned them is not known, but based on the value of Indian artifacts today, they have to be worth thousands of dollars," Hall said.

He cited as an example, a rare Kwakiutl ceremonial dance mask which was recently sold in the U.S. by a private collector for close to $200,000.

Marked Drop in U.S. TV Viewing

By BARRY SUSSMAN
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A majority of Americans say they are watching less television than they used to, a nationwide Washington Post poll has found.

A marked decline in viewing was reported among more affluent and better-educated people, among those who say the quality of TV programs is deteriorating, and among those who report the sharpest dislike for TV commercials. But a lesser decline in viewing also was reported among the bulk of the population — among blacks and whites, women and men, young an old.

In all, 53 per cent of those interviewed said they are watching less TV than they did five years ago, compared with 32 per cent who say they are watching more now.

If those figures are correct, or even close to being correct, they represent a stiking reversal in U.S. entertainment and leisure habits. From the inception of TV until the mid-1970s, viewership had been reported as increasing year after year.

Executives at ABC, CBS and NBC, apprised of these findings, said TV viewing may have levelled off after having reached a "saturation point" several years ago. But they questioned whether people are watching less TV than before.

Jay Eliasberg, a vice-president for research at CBS, said: "I know people are not watching less television, it's that simple."

Saying Nielsen reports and other industry-sponsored gauges of viewing supported his position, Eliasberg maintained that "except for tiny squiggles, TV viewing has not changed in the last three years."

Eliasberg and other TV excutives are skeptical of poll data, saying people are not the best judges of their own television-viewing behavior: if there is a stigma attached to watching television, a natural response would be to deny watching very much.

The Post poll suggests at least part of the reported decline in viewing is tied to strong feelings on the part of many who feel the quality of TV entertainment has been deteriorating.

Over-all, 40 per cent of those interviewed said TV entertainment is better now than it was five years ago, and 41 per cent said it is worse — an even split, with the rest saying it is about the same as it was or offering no opinion.

Trading resumed at about 11:15 a.m. in shares of Dome Petroleum Ltd. after a halt of about three-quarters of an hour. The Toronto Stock Exchange said common shares of the company will be subdivided on a four-for-one basis, subject to shareholder approval May 7.

Dome Petroleum gained 5 to $116¼.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market slipped a bit further today in the aftermath of Tuesday's selloff.

Losers outnumbered gainers by a 3-to-2 margin in the over-all tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Blue-chip issues attracted some modest buying interest early in the session with the Dow Jones industrial average at its lowest level in two months. But the effort at a rally made little headway.

Gainers among recently-depressed issues included Polaroid, up ½ to $39⅞, and Boeing, up ¼ to $62⅜.

Narco Scientific tumbled 9¼ to $17 following word late Tuesday that Rorer Group had dropped plans to acquire the company. Rorer shares gained 1⅝ to $16⅝ in active trading.

Dome Petroleum, which proposed a 4-for-1 stock split, climbed 3⅜ to $96⅜ on the American Stock Exchange.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) - Prices continued to decline in very heavy afternoon trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange today, as the composite index fell 0.33 at 236.23. Trading was very heavy in the current rights issue of the Bank of Nova Scotia, which fell 1½ cent at 34 cents on a volume of 1,160,504 shares traded. Bank of Nova Scotia shares rose ⅛ at $24⅜ on a volume of 120,300 shares traded. Among senior industrials, Noranda A topped losers, declining ½ at $42¾ on a volume of 13,091 shares traded. Alcan lost ⅜ at $42¼, INCO ⅛ at $22⅜ and Royal Bank ⅝ at $40. Petrofina Canada gained ¼ at $23¾, Seagram ¼ at $35¼ and Canadian Cellulose ⅛ at $9⅛.

'The Protectors' Save Art

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

LIVERPOOL, England (CP) — A piece of the ancient Greek temple Parthenon, delivered here by ship from Athens, could help save the world's greatest art treasures.

It has been sent to preservation experts in Liverpool by Greek archaeologists who are desperate to save the 2,400-year-old Parthenon from destruction by pollution.

The restoration will be tackled by the British firm of Balvac in Kirkby, Liverpool, which is famous for saving the world's architectural showpieces.

Already Balvac's experts have saved doomed statues in the Porta Della Carta of Venice and are working on statues in Rome which are being eaten away by traffic pollution. Their work in preserving monumental stone works in Britain, including St. Andrew at St. Paul's Cathedral in London, has earned them a special title among historians — The Protectors.

"Most of the danger to historic architecture has occurred during the last 50 years," says Roger France, who leads a team of experts at Balvac. "The main causes are exhaust fumes from vehicles and industrial waste."

Balvac is a subsidiary of the Balfour Beatty Construction Co. of Edinburgh. It joined the preservation battle as the result of an invention in 1972 by James Milne, one of the firm's engineers.

"We impregnate the threatened stone with silicone to a depth of one or two inches," Milne says. "The silicone is sucked into the stone by means of a vacuum created round the stone in a polythene bag. This effectively seals the stone."

Balvac so far has used its ultra-modern techniques to protect such treasures of Britain's past as the 119-year-old Genius of Architecture statue in Princes Park, Edinburgh, Scotland, and the majestic Lady Jerningham statue at Berwick-on-Tweed.

Use of Guns by Criminals Rising Sharply in Britain

MANCHESTER, England (CP) — The Police Federation reports a sharp increase in the use of firearms by criminals in Britain since the abolition of the death penalty in 1948.

"There is now little difference in the penalties faced by the criminal who kills in the course of a robbery and the criminal who does not kill but uses a firearm," says the federation in its magazine Police.

It says Parliament has created a climate in which the criminal use of fire-arms has accelerated. Referring to recent cases in which police shot two suspects dead, the magazine says:

"This has led to suggestions that the police are being armed by the back door: In fact the police have been completely open about the growth of firearms in the service. This applies to equipment, training and the number of occasions on which firearms have been carried.

The Police Federation says thousands of British policemen now have been trained to use weapons.
